

Sue Bennett will host Summer skills workshop

High school juniors and seniors will have a special opportunity to improve their academic skills this summer at Sue Bennett College.

According to Dr. John Patterson, Sue Bennett College President, a special workshop will be offered in June for high school juniors and seniors who want to begin to prepare themselves for college work. The workshop, which is entitled "Learning to Cope in the 80's: College Survival Skills," will provide commuting students with a week of concentrated study in the areas of college reading skills, vocabulary improvement, and basic study skills.

"Sue Bennett is pleased to offer this program as part of our service approach to the community," Dr. Patterson said. "This is an opportunity for students to use their summer months to hone their academic skills, in order that they might be prepared to excel in high school and college, to meet the demands of upper-level education."

According to Dr. Patterson, enrollment will be limited to a small number of students.

He indicated that the total cost for each student enrolled would be $150, with a limited number of scholarships available to students.

Academic Dean Joan Stivers noted that the program will help to fill a gap for many students. "Unfortunately," she said, "Many students of real ability do not succeed in college because they lack sufficient study skills to perform effectively in an academic environment. We hope to provide those who complete this course with the necessary competencies to be successful in their chosen curriculum."

"However," she said, "It is not always the poor student who has problems in college."

"Too often," she noted, "It is the bright student who succeeds in high school without really trying—only to get to college and find that the necessary skills for survival are lacking. Then, if not for some coursed and quits. Or, worse, he stops trying and flunks out," she said. "We hope to help students cope with the college adjustments."

The workshop will be under the direction of Mrs. Virginia Baker, Director of the Learning Resource Center at Sue Bennett. Mrs. Baker received graduate degree in English, and also in reading, and has also done additional graduate work at Eastern Kentucky University and the University of Kentucky. She has taught English at Sue Bennett and Union College, and worked with reading and study skills classes at Sue Bennett.

Cancer patients know your doctor

If you or someone close to you is diagnosed with one of a hundred plus diseases called "cancer," you may be confused by the array of medical specialists who treat cancer patients. Often a family doctor or local clinic can refer you to the appropriate specialist or you can call 1-800-4-CANCER, the Cancer Information Service for referral to a certified specialist in your area.

Cancer specialists include the following:

Medical Oncologists: Doctors of internal medicine with specialized training in treating cancer patients. Medical oncologists treat patients with chemotherapy and other medical interventions. They may also monitor the overall health of patients being treated by surgical oncologists and/or radiation oncologists.

Pediatric Oncologists: Pediatricians with specialized training in childhood cancers. They treat patients with chemotherapy and other medical modalities.

Radiation Oncologists: Physicians who treat cancer patients with various forms of radiation therapy. This specialist, also known as a radiation therapist, differs from a radiologist who interprets X-rays for diagnostic purposes.

Surgical Oncologists: Specialists who perform operations on cancer patients.

Gynecologic Oncologists: Gynecologists with specialized training in female reproductive system cancers.

For help in understanding cancer treatment or referral to cancer related treatment or support services, call toll free, 1-800-4-CANCER, the Cancer Information Service.

Prior to her present position, Mrs. Baker also worked with Upward Bound students. A reading specialist, she has served at Sue Bennett as a reading consultant to local high schools, visiting students in the classroom and doing short-term workshops.

"We are confident that Mrs. Baker will have a program which will make a difference in the lives of young men and women in this area," said Dr. Patterson. "We are continually seeking to expand Sue Bennett's offerings to the community and the summer skills program is part of our total service to the community."

According to Dr. Patterson, information on the workshop will be available shortly to high school principals and guidance counselors in the schools in this area.

Parents and others who wish additional information or would like to obtain registration forms also contact Mrs. Joan Stivers, Academic Dean, Sue Bennett College, London, Ky. Or, for more information, call her office at the College, at (606) 864-2228.

A National Center for Health Statistics study found among 25-to-34-year-old women, black women are 12 percentage points more likely to smoke than white women.

Debbie Bowman is 10th in nation in assists in Division III-NCAA

Mt. Vernon native and Berea College senior Debbie Bowman is a member of the Berea College women's basketball team where she was recently awarded the honor of being the 10th leading assist leader in the nation (NCAA, Division III). She set a new college record in one game this season with 13 assists.

Bowman, a 5-7 guard/forward, is a graduate of Rockcastle County High School. She is a strong team leader on and off the court, according to head coach Martha Beagle. "She exemplifies qualities that I, as a coach, am proud to be associated with," said Beagle.

Beagle is beginning her third season as head coach of Berea's Lady Mountaineers. She has improved Berea's record each year, managing an 8-8 record last season. This year she expects her team to go above the 500 mark and to perform well in post-season tournaments. Berea's women's basketball team is a member of the NCAA Division III. The team will compete in the WIAA (Women's Intercollegiate Athletic Conference) tournament, Feb. 26-28.

Bowman, who works as a student associate at Woods Feminist gymnasium in the College on-campus labor program, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Bowman of Mt. Vernon.

CHRISTIAN EXCELLENCE

"Mediocrity has come to characterize the behavior of most people in most of our institutions. People grow up in homes with mediocre parents, receive a mediocre education, become mediocre in their productivity in industries that reek of mediocrity. They live out their Christian commitment in a mediocre fashion within the context of churches that have mediocre programs. It is not surprising that Jon Johnston, speaking as one committed to the holiness tradition of Christianity, should find mediocrity to be intolerable. He refuses to allow the admonition of Christ to be "perfect" to be viewed as an unattainable goal that no one is expected to achieve, although nice to have for motivational purposes. Johnston makes it clear that excellence is a requirement of the Christian. To him, holiness is excellence. Love is excellence and being Christian is excellence.
