It is very difficult for people my age, and impossible for modern youth, to image what life must have been like in the 1800s in America.

The country was experiencing tremendous growth and the industrial revolution was booming. The Civil War lasted until 1865 and every American experienced the reality of a bloody war while factories, mines, mills and the railroad were the center of life for all.

Once the war was over and the inductive and the tion was still expanding, in order to keep their jobs, people had to outwork and out produce machines. Machines that could operate 24 hours per day, seven days per week were boosting America's ability to make and sell products across the country and the typical hard working American had trouble remaining needed.

Machines never complained. Business owners didn't have to build bathrooms for a machine. They didn't need to take breaks or a lunch hour and they didn't take off when a relative got sick. Machines didn't need insurance and never asked for a raise or a vacation. So hard working Americans began competing by working non stop under horrible conditions for minimal pay. For America on the world stage it was a magnificent time of growth and development. For the family trying to keep their heads above water, it was self destructive and people began to fall apart. The state of the second There were strikes and riots and shootings and fights between the rich and the poor. The Haymarket Riot caused the death of seven police officers and four civilians and sparked a national battle between the rich and the poor. This tension was building quickly even as a civil war had just ended and fears that another war was about to begin crept across the kitchen tables of America. Over 10,000 workers in New York walked off their jobs in May of 1882 and factory owners threatened to replace them with even more machines.

A nationwide argument ensued and I believe another civil war was only weeks from starting.

So, many cities began recognizing the first weekend in September as Workforce Day. Workers took the day off and celebrated the hard

Autumn is Here Dear Journal,

Here it is, the first weekend of the fall. As the summer draws to a close I'm welcoming the fall to begin. Tomorrow, Stanley and I are going to get out of the house and just drive around a bit, maybe to neighboring counties, just sightseeing. It is one of my favorite things to do. We won't have a specific destination. We will probably do the same thing again when the leaves begin to turn.

Among the things we plan for tomorrow is going to a restaurant with TVs and watching the season opener of the Kentucky Wildcats football season. I've missed football during the summer. I'd love to see a Bengals game or so this year. I've noticed that the days are getting shorter for the last few weeks. It won't be long until the time is set back and all of the fall holidays begin. I hate to see the cold weather begin but it is just one of the things you must endure with the fall and winter. I've already and fell in love with their liberal guests. I always thought it was more like a Saturday Night Live parody than a news cast. You know, pretending to be a journalist and yet being completely drenched in bias, with one-sided reporting. It was hilarious.

It has bothered me a little that our tax dollars support a comedy show whether we like it or not and their constant begging for money gets a little old sometimes. But all in all, at least it provided a laugh when I wasdown or had a hard day.

had some NPR promotion advertisement on. It sounded like a 12-yearold kid but he was talking about how other media outlets are biased and he was so glad to be a 'reporter" for an unbiased outlet. He talked about how nice it was to have unbiased journalism since the other networks are all so onesided.

But last week, they

Here's the catch. I don't think he was joking. I am beginning to think the "reporters" on NPR actually think they are some kind of journalists or something.

And then, when he started talking about how horrible it is for other media outlets to be so one-sided and he was such a proud "journalist," I began to think he really thinks that. What kind of person would work for a comedy outlet and think he is really a serious journalist?

If he were indeed serious and somehow has let himself be convinced that NPR is anything more than a comedy outlet, then he should win some sort of Gullible Award, 🛝

I really don't believe any news organization on Earth is as one-sided and biased as NPR. I am amazed every week at their liberal antics. I listen as they become these angry German Shepherds, arguing and ridiculing and cutting off and demonizing. back-alley brawling with ganda-spreading liberal marketing advertisers I have ever witnessed.

Not a day passes without one of them telling black people that they can't accomplish anything good unless a white person gives it to them or does it for them. They spend their days promoting the idea that no race of people can succeed without the white man's help. They make other races sound like lesser humans every day and praise Al Gore's hot Earth ideas all the while.

I was very proud of my profession all my life. But if they are seriously calling themselves journalists now, then I am nauseated by the idea that NPR could be considered journalism.

If there was a bias contest network on Earth, NPR would be the top, number one winner in the class A, division of propaganda.

Every week I hear them slamming some conservative idea and praising some far left, anti-freedom agenda and then they tell you it is fact. They act as though their opinion is the ultimate test for factual data and try to give the impression that it is so, because they said so.

Anyway, I think I will just assume that 12-yearold fellow was kidding too and the joke went over my head. After all, surely he knows. If he has ears to hear other views and eyes to read the Constitution. he would have to know. he is paid by a comedy net work. Main with the move

Just remember, journalists tell you what others say and do and then let you decide how you feel about that. It is that simple. You don't need a reporter's opinion about what a President says or does. You just need to know what he said and what he did. You are not an idiot.

The movies come to Rockcastle County

The motion picture industry got it's start sometime in the late 1870s. Photographers wanted to find new and exciting ways to exhibit their photos. From an article published on PBS.org, titled, "The Early History of Motion Pictures", by Mary Pickford, the motion picture idea started with a device called a zoetrope. The zoetrope allowed viewers to see a series of photos of a horse galloping. These early "moving" pictures set the industry in motion. In 1879 came the zoogyroscope which allowed images to be projected. In 1890 Thomas Edison and his partner, William Dickson, invented a camera called the kinetograph the original moving picture camera. Pickford states that this early camera led to the creation of the next important invention known as the kinetoscope that allowed for moving pictures to be projected onto a screen. Edison, himself, could be credited as the creator of movie theaters, he opened the first "kinetoscope parlors" a place to see these "movies".

What, you may ask does any of this have to do with the history of Rockastle County? Rockcastle Countians were not immune to the lure of Hollywood and the motion picture industry. Each of the three major towns provided centers of entertainment. Mt. Vernon, Brodhead, and Livingston each had movie theaters. The Miller Theatre, in Mt. Vernon, was constructed in 1927 and ac-work of American citizens. Soon President Cleveland gave into the state's arguments and signed a bill naming the first weekend of September as "Labor Day" to observe the hard working "men" of America. In those days they didn't give women much credit for anything.

It wasn't until the mid 1940s that the 40-hour work week started to become the normal, accepted standard and working conditions began to be competitive. As factory owners began to realize that the best machine can never replace even an average worker, factories began to compete for good workers. So conditions started to improve in order to attract better workers.

Labor Day is now celebrated every year as we recognize the efforts of all who face the weather, the challenges and the battles of life to get the job done. Of all the holidays, Labor Day is the one that celebrates all of us who work and contribute to society and make life better for all Americans. It is us, the hard working, dedicated people, who show up on time and actually care about what we produce, that makes America great.

If you have a job or are retired after working a lifetime, Labor Day is actually a holiday about you and me. I have worked in the public for 46 years now. If you have worked a life away, I think we are in a pretty special club. We contributed. We did our part. We created and built and repaired. We ignored hurting body parts and frozen ground and we kept our word. We made a difference. We fought the odds and sacrificed because we were raised to know the value of a good day's work. We appreciate our employers and take pride in what we do. Cheers to all who believe in hard work. Hope you had a great Labor Day.

cording to an archived edition of the Mt. Vernon Signal, was originally owned by Milton J. Miller and opened with a silent movie entitled "Men of Steel" starring Milton Sills. The movie, according to the Mt. Vernon Signal, ran with only the sound of a threepiece orchestra--Mr. And Mrs. Bragg Thompson and son, Robert Huffman. In the March 29, 1928 edition of the Signal, The Miller Theater of Mt. Vernon advertised for the week beginning Monday, April 2 a different movie each day! Clara Bow in "Rough House Rosie", Harry Langdon in "Three's a Crowd", Edmund Lowe in "What Price Glory", Lon Chaney in the mystery-horror film "London After Midnight", the crime drama, "By Whose Hand" starring Ricardo Cortez was the big show on Friday night and Saturday offered a double feature with "Painted Ponies" starring Hoot Gibson and Donald Keith in "Top Sergeant Mulligan". Admission was .15 and .35 cents! The doors opened at 7:00 and the show started at 7:30. Saturday Matinee was at 1:30 p.m. The theatre continued to make renovations and grow with the industry. In 1956 even boasted a wide vision screen! The theatre was renamed the Vernon Theatre and was in operation until 1962. The Vernon seems to have been the longest-running theatre in Rockcastle County.

The city of Brodhead did not get its own theater until 1940. According to website, Cinematreasures.org, Mr. Dan Gray opened the Gray Theater on August 6, 1940, featuring the film "We Who Are Young" starring Lana Turner. Admission for the Gray Theatre in March 1941 was .10 and .19 cents. The Gray Theater was also open nightly Saturday and Sunday. Dan Gray did have some problems. The Gray Theater was closed for 19 days in 1950 because Mr. Gray was arrested for failing to pay an imposed license tax/on all businesses operating any type of theater. Gray was opposed to such a tax and according to the Cinema Treasures website, voiced his disagreement in the Interior Journal of Stanford. He wrote:

By: Markita Proctor "As a citizen of the town and operator of a legitimate business, we bear without complaint the taxes which are paid by all - But we resent and properly oppose being singled out for discriminatory treatment. IT IS MOST UNFAIR AND UNJUST. Why should one business in town be picked to pay an extra and excessive tax, and other business places not pay, especially when that business is an asset to the town. It brings in more people and more business to the town, and benefits the town collectively as much as it does me. Mt. Vernon, Livingston, Crab Orchid, and Stanford do not pay this tax (I pay the same as they do) so why should the Town Board think I should pay it." The Gray Theatre was eventually sold to the eventually sold to the Roaden Theater Company and was in operation throughout the early 1950s and the name may have been changed to Town Theatre as evidenced by the photo published in the Mt. Vernon Signal.

Livingston, Ky. also provided locals with a movie theatre as well. The Webb Theatre is believed to have opened in Livingston sometime in 1951, The April 12, 1951 issue of the Mt. Vernon Signal ran an advertisement for The Webb Theater and the week's nightly features. Sunday through Monday locals could see June Haver and Gordon McRae in "The Daughter of Rosie O'Grady". Little is published on the Webb The-Mt. Vernon also offered a drive-in theatre. Located about a half mile from Mt. Vernon, The Valley Theatre offered movies on both Friday and Saturday nights, usually with a double feature on Saturdays. The Drivein was located near the current truck stop just outside of Renfro Valley. It opened sometime around 1956 and was in operation through the mid-1970s. It seems as if I remember seeing a movie there when I was a kid in the '70s. I think it was "Ode to Billy Joe" starring Robby Benson and Glynnis O'Connor or possibly "Walking Tall", the movie based on the life of Buford Pusser starring Joe Don Baker... either actually caused me to seriously question my parent's decisions of what we should or should not have been watching. But it was a different time, I guess.

Later came video stores. One could rent a VCR and a movie at the old Fain Furniture building located on West Main St. Later there was a video store located just out of town on the north end of Main St. and eventually a Blockbuster. That is where I took my own children to rent Power Rangers or whatever video game they desired for the weekend.

Ah Yes, there was a time when the golden age of Hollywood reached as far as Rockcastle County, Kentucky. In fact, there are stories of Jane Fonda coming to Rockcastie County to learn the Appalachian dialect for her feature role in the 1984 role in "The Dollmaker" and another story of the 1997 Steven Seagal film "Fire Down Below" which was partially filmed at Great Saltpetre Cave...both stories for another time...The fact is, the good people of Rockcastle County did seem to enjoy a good movie. Now though, with the advent of streaming, the movie industry has changed drastically since the good ol' days of the silver screen. But many of us do remember when...

The economy was good enough that workers could begin to pick and choose where they would work and owners had to create better work environments and offer better benefits to compete with other factories and mills for those workers. Railroad work was a sought-after job.

God Knows My Name

Have you ever thought how important a "name" is? Knowing someone's name is helping that person to feel known, understood and values.

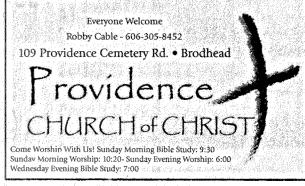

God calls us by some very special names such as beloved, sons and daughters, his heirs, and the apple of His eye. When we accept Christ and embrace his mission, we get a new nickname that reflects his promise and our purpose. Our names reflect our individuality, and to have the same name written in Heaven that was our on Earth speaks of the continuity between this life and the next. How amazing it is that our name to God is not only for us on this Earth but will dwell with us into eternity.

Many characters from the old and new testaments were given a new name by father God when they began living by faith. A name rooted in spirituality can alter the path of the soul that carries the name.

He knew us from our mother's womb. We read this in Jeremiah 1:5. Before I formed thee in the belly, I knew thee; and before thou camest forth out of the womb I sanctified thee and I ordained thee a prophet unto the nations.

God told Moses in Exodus 33:17 And the Lord said unto Moses, I will do this thing also that thou hast spoken for thou hast found grace in my sight and I know thee by name. God also knows us by name and we also can find that grace that God supplied for us.

One of the most important times that our name is to be called by God calls it from the book of life. We can read this in Revelations 20:12. I can only hope and pray that we walk diligently upon this Earth and when the judgement is upon us, that God knows us by name and says, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

Singleton said she and other organizers appreciate the support shown over the weekend. "They came from many states away and just down the road. But they all came for one reason. To be with their community, their family and their friends," she said.

She said many visitors asked about Livingston's growth plans "They asked and listened closely as plans for enhancement and progress are ongoing and all agreed they can't wait until next year."

Judge Howell Holbrook, Jr. said he too was pleased with the event. "I thought things went great and traffic cleared out much better than in the past too," he said. "It was a good, clean event and I believe everyone had a great time."

Plans for the 2024 Homecoming event have already begun but officials say the event is being tentatively planned for the park again next year.

females were transported to Rockcastle County Detention Center and charged with endangering the welfare of a minor, among other drug charges.

According to police reports the motorist nearly struck the young child crossing the road and stopped to take the child home. The motorist could not get an answer at the front door but eventually got an answer at the rear door. The motorist told police the two women in the home appeared "dazed." There was also another child in the home according to the report. Once police arrived, the report says officers could hear yelling and arguing inside. Once inside the home, the citation says Kentucky State Police, who arrived shortly after the incident began, the Mount Vernon Police Department and Constable Steve Griffin noticed suspected marijuana and a glass pipe on the bed in open view and were then given written permission to search the home. According to the citation, police found four grams of methamphetamine and other drug paraphernalia in an initial search. When police asked if there were more drugs in the home, the citation says Jones said there was not but Charlton spoke up and said "give them the baggie before they tear the house apart." At that point, Jones led police to eight to ten more grams of meth in a kitchen cabinet where she said she kept it out of reach of the children.

throughout the home and observed that both the children were dirty. A social services worker with the DCBS then arrived at the scene and placed the two children in emergency custody.

Both Charlton and Jones were arrested and transported to the Rockcastle County Detention Center. Charlton was charged with trafficking in a controlled substance, possession of synthetic drugs, possession of drug paraphernalia and endangering the welfare of a minor. Jones was charged with endangering the welfare of a minor, trafficking in a controlled substance, possession of drug paraphernalia and possession of a synthetic drug.

ing the infant. Concern apparently began when the child arrived for a routine follow-up appointment and was found to have significantly enlarged head and a history of episodes of limpness and vomiting. Upon examination, the child was found to have bilateral chronic subdural hemorrhage, according to the warrant. Pediatric Forensic Medicine found such injuries are "diagnostic of abusive head trauma in the absence of plausible explanation."

The warrant continues to say the infant had suffered from two brain bleeds and had brain surgery in July and in August of 2023

"She Hath Done What She Could" (Mark 14:3-8)

Some murmured against Mary and called this waste. Jesus commended her. What we do for Jesus is not wasted.

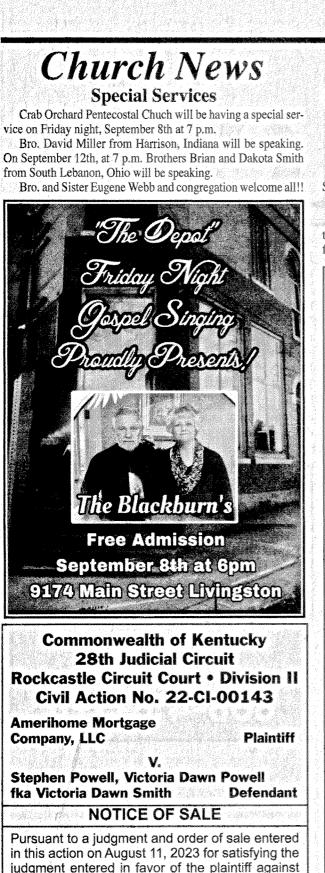

"Hath Done." The text suggests that Christianity is a religion of doing things, it is not something one gets, but something one does. One must do something to be saved (Acts 2:37) Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men and brethern what shall we do? Must do good works after being saved. (2 Pet.1:5-8) And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge: And to knowledge; temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity. For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall be neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.

"What She Could." The text suggest we should all do what we can. God holds each responsible for what he can do, rather than what he cannot do. True of giving. (2Cor.8:12) For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not. "True of talents". (Matt.25:14-30) God ask no more out of us than what we can do, but he does command us all to do something, and to use our talents to glorify the Father, when we become a part of the Kingdom. "The Unprofitable Servant." (Matt.25:30) And cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. The only servant that was punished was the one who did nothing. "Hence talents require responsibility."

The greatest need in the church is not eloquence, education, nor wealth, but the spirit which will cause every man, woman, boy and girl, just to do what they can.
