Tax increase for Soil Conservation District stayed

Houk verifies over the 643 signatures needed

By: Richard Anderkin

Rockcastle County Clerk Norma Houk said Wednesday that she had verified enough of the approximately 1,200 signatures she received Monday to challenge a tax rate increase for the Rockcastle Soil Conservation District, to have the issue

Festival is this weekend

This Friday and Saturday, Bittersweet Festival goers will be treated to a new and improved festival -- more top notch entertainment, more contests and, of course, the usual first rate craft and food vendors.

The Mt. Vernon "Amazing Race" has been added to this year's festival and will begin at 8 a.m. on Saturday morning, just after the 5K Run and Health Walk begins at 7:30 a.m.

Also new this year is the Miss Bittersweet Pageant. Sign-ups for the Miss Bittersweet Festival Pageant will be held October 5th from 2 to 4 p.m. in the third floor conference room at the courthouse and judging begins at 5:30 p.m. Friday and the winner will be presented on stage on Main Street at 7:30 p.m.

The festival opens Friday at 4 p.m. and Ruby Powell and Friends will be performing from 4:15 to 5:15, followed by Southern Skye, presentation of Miss Bittersweet and then the Wild River Band will close out Friday's events.

Saturday's events begin with the 5K Run and Health Walk at 7:30 a.m., followed by the Amazing Race at 8 a.m.; entertainment by Northside Baptist Church from 10 to 11 a.m., 7th Tyme Down performing from 11 a.m. to noon and the Bittersweet Cloggers will perform from noon to 1 p.m., placed on the 2008 November General Election ballot.

Houk said Bob Randolph of Willailla, and other members of a five man committee, turned petitions in at her office on Monday with over the needed Tax bills will be due on November 1st - 643 signatures on them.

643 verified signatures of registered voters in the county were required to stay the tax increase for this year and to place the issue on the ballot in November of 2008. The local Soil Conservation board passed a 2.6c tax increase on August 17th and anyone wishing to file a recall petition had until Monday, October 1st to present the petitions to Houk.

The University of Kentucky Wildcat football team is 5-0 on the season and ranked number eight in the country. Two of those Wildcats are offensive linemen Jason Leger and Brad Durham, both former Rockcastle County High School Rockets. Leger #66, is shown above pass blocking for UK quarterback Andre Woodson, who had just thrown the ball to Dicky Lyons, Jr., in the Wildcats' 45-17 win over Florida Atlantic on Saturday. Leger, a senior, has been named Southeastern Conference Lineman of the Week twice this season. Below, Durham, #75, a true freshman, is shown talking to members of the starting UK offensive line, after UK's first scoring drive on Saturday. Durham would see action later in the game on Saturday. Leger is shown far left. Leger and Durham are the only two Rockets who have ever played Division I football from the ROCK.

This year's rate on the tax bills for the Soil Conservation District will be the same 9/10 a cent per $100 assessed value.

Once the tax bills have been printed, they will go to Sheriff Mike Peters' office for mailing.

Houk said her office had worked overtime all week to get their part done and that tax bills would be mailed near the end of October and become due on November 1st.

Although the property tax bills are being mailed a month later than usual, taxpayers will still be able to take advantage of all discounts normally available on their tax bills since the dates will automatically be pushed forward to November 1st when collection begins.

According to police, Virginia, "Jenna Lee" Hansel, 64, of Quail was involved in the 3 p.m. crash on Interstate 75 at the 47 mile marker in Laurel County, as she traveled south toward London.

Killed in the crash was an 82-year-old Oak Ridge, Tenn., woman, her 81-year-old husband and a 61-year-old woman from Rome, Ga.

Hansel said this week that she was traveling back to London from Mt. Vernon to Levi-Jackson State Park where she and her husband were camping for the week when the wreck happened.

"I was following the black car in the passing lane when I saw a white blur coming out of the median and then the collision in front of me and into me - it all happened so fast," she said.

According to police, the woman from Oak Ridge crossed the median in her minivan, from the northbound lanes of I-75, struck the sedan Hansel was following, in the driver's side, spinning the car around in front of Hansel's vehicle, which hit the sedan in the passenger side.

The mini-van continued on after the collision and came to rest on top of the guardrail. Hansel's vehicle and the sedan

Hansel said that a elderly couple, who saw the wreck happen, stopped in the northbound emergency lane and came to her aid.

"Both doors were stuck and I couldn't get out the car, but they finally managed to get the driver's side open enough that I could get out," she said.

Shown above are the smashed cars and debris, which littered Interstate 75 near the 47 mile marker in Laurel County last Wednesday, after a wreck that killed three people. Police said that the vehicle at right (top photo) was northbound when it crossed the median and struck the black car in the middle of the photo, which was headed south. That vehicle, and the Explorer, above, at left, and shown at right, then collided. Mrs. Virginia Hansel of Quail walked away from the deadly accident that claimed the lives of everyone else involved in the accident. The wreck closed the interstate for several hours. I have always loved driving around in my car. I think the reason is because my grandfather (Pop) and grandmother (Mommie Katie) started me out very young by allowing me to go with them on Saturday nights when they went to Mt. Vernon to watch the people and to see what was happening in town.

Before we left home, Mommie Katie made sure the dinner dishes were clean and put away. (She would never consider leaving a mess when she was leaving the house.) At the same time, Pop went out to the garage and checked everything about the car – kicking the tires and checking the oil. Only then would we be ready to go on what I considered to be our adventure.

When I was seven, Pop began letting me accompany him and Mommie Katie in their new '51 Chevy as they drove to town on Saturday night. That is when a lot of people went to town to window-shop and to visit with one another. (And basically to catch up on local gossip.)

Pop selected a parking space near Cummins' Grocery or in front of the Mt. Vernon Hotel for a good view of who was in town. For a couple of hours, we sat on Main Street watching everyone who passed by on the main drag. Some would stop to chat. Both of my grandparents knew almost everyone, and many couples also parked and walked over to our car just to see how we were getting along.

I realize that this whole process seems just too boring but to a young boy, the scene was very cool. The town never bustled with people like it did on Saturday nights. There was no need for a special event to draw people together. After a long, hard week of work and before a day of worship, Saturday evenings were the social event. Most everyone could afford it since it only required the gas to get to town.

Pop usually gave me 25 cents to walk up to the Ideal Café to get ice cream so I would not get fidgety. The walk was only about 100 feet, and I am sure he watched me in his rear-view mirror until I returned with my prize.

Sometimes Mommie Katie and some of her friends walked up the street to peer into the window at McBee's Department Store. At other times, she and Pop might take me into the Ideal Café to get a Coke and a bag of peanuts. Mommie Katie had false teeth and could not eat the nuts. She knew that I loved to pour my peanuts into the Coke, and she wanted me to be satisfied with the visit downtown.

On rare occasions, Mommie Katie suggested that Pop take us for a drive. (This was only after she was sure that she had talked to everyone downtown.) Pop was a very frugal individual but he always made sure that his automobile had a radio. As he chauffeured us through the side streets of Mt. Vernon, he listened to the radio – usually the news or some country music station. Mommie Katie took notice of all of her friends that were at home.

Occasionally, she instructed Pop to stop if someone was sitting on their porch. When that happened, they could spend a great deal of time gossiping about everything possible.

Such Saturday nights were truly great adventures to me, and I looked forward to every one. We had a full week before

Dear Journal:

Fall has always been such a delightful time of the year for me. The colors are so vibrant and beautiful. The air (hopefully, some day) has crispness to it and everything seems so "homey" and cozy. It is a time to gather family close and share a kettle of cider and read select poems.

Poems are a delight at any time of the year, but poetry with fall flair is so appealing. One of my favorites is "October's Party." I thought I'd share it with my readers.

Inmates Increasingly Granted Parole

A report released at the end of 2006 discloses that state inmates are being paroled at an unprecedented rate. Despite lengthy sentences handed out by state court judges and the purported "get tough" on crime mentality which has become increasingly prevalent in recent function of the executive branch of the government, i.e., the branch headed by the governor, or when talking about the federal government, the president. Parole is not granted by the judicial branch, i.e. the courts. In fact, the courts have little or no impact on the fate of a defendant once the defendant has been sentenced. At that point, with a few limited exceptions, jurisdiction passes from the judiciary to the executive branch--usually the state Department of Corrections.

So far nobody has registered any surprise at Fred Beste's news last week regarding a 52 pound muskie that was caught on a road killed squirrel. John Howard from Pike County emailed me to asked if the squirrel was "ripe" and if it said anywhere in the story about where the fisherman put the hook. He said he'd heard that muskie always swallowed stuff head first and hadn't figured out how to get a hook through one's skull. He was also wanted to know if it was a fox squirrel or a gray and whether or not I thought one killed with a shotgun would work just as well.

that it would be just as easy to find a road kill as to shoot one but that if I was a muskie I'd rather have a fox squirrel because they taste better.

much difference because a muskie is not apt to be making gravy to go with its squirrel.

No sooner had I finished corresponding with Howard than Mike Mitchell called up and told me that he was fishing in Canada one time and ran out of buck-tail jigs and that's all the pike were hitting. It was like 50 miles of back country road to the nearest bait store and that he and his buddies drew straws to see who had to make the trip, which was going to take at least five hours.

He said the camp where they were staying was covered up with big black squirrels with the bushiest tails he'd ever seen. Mike had wound up not having to make the bait run so while he was waiting around, he asked the camp owner if he had a rifle and if it was legal to kill the squirrels.

The owner loaned him a .22 and said kill all he wanted as long as he was going to eat em. So Mitchell acted like he couldn't live without a mess of squirrels and promptly shot half a dozen and then made a big show of dressing them out for the cooking pot.

Then he took off to the lake with their tails and some big two ounce lead jigs with 4.0 hooks. He threaded on a squirrel tail and caught a 20 pound pike on the first cast and it went on like that all day until his (Cont. to A4)

Does Poison Ivy Spread?

Poison ivy causes a rash with blisters that sometimes just seems to keep increasing. Because of this, many people believe that poison ivy spreads and that the fluid from the blisters contains a poison.

There are a couple reasons why the David Brabon, M.D. rash of poison ivy spreads, but the fluid from the blisters is not one of them. This fluid is just serum from the body, the same as any other "water blister."

The damage from poison ivy occurs almost immediately after contact with the plant. The allergic reaction occurs when the resin in the sap binds with proteins of the skin. Only by washing the area within minutes of exposure can some of the reaction be averted. After the resin has become bound to the skin it is only a matter of timeusually 2-3 days-before a person breaks out with the typical red, itchy skin and blisters of poison ivy.

Pollen and dust allergies occur immediately because the reaction is caused by a pre-formed antibody. With poison ivy, the poison binds with the skin immediately, but the rash is delayed because the reaction is caused by allergic cells which take time to multiply.

One of the reasons that the reactions appear to spread is because thinner skin may break out quicker than areas of thicker skin. The more sensitive skin will show the reaction first, but the other areas will follow. Also, area with greater exposure to the poison will break out sooner. Finally, repeated exposures to poison ivy or even indirectly from animals, tools, clothes or other objects will cause more blisters to break out. Prevention is the key, of course, but medicines can help slow the reaction and decrease the symptoms.

Board. The members are then approved by the state Senate. According to the Parole Board, they are "the primary releasing authority for all convicted felons and youthful offenders into the Commonwealth of Ken-Parole is purely a tive purposes.

tucky." The Board determines when to release an offender prior to the expiration of the sentence imposed by the Court, sets the conditions under which parolees must abide, and revokes those parolees who violate the conditions of parole.

Inmates are eligible to be considered for early release from prison depending on their parole eligibility date. Most offenders are eligible to be considered for parole after serving only 20% of their court imposed sentence. Furthermore, parole eligibility includes time the offender served prior to their conviction. Certain violent offenses require service of a greater percentage of the court imposed sentence. For example, a defendant convicted of Rape in the First Degree is required to serve 85% of the court imposed sentence before becoming eligible for parole. The job of the Parole Board is not an easy one. The members review thousands of cases and are constantly aware of the tremendous economic burdens that burgeoning prison populations impose on taxpayers. According to the 2006 report, the prison population continues to soar, indicating that courts are increasingly sentencing criminal defendants to prison, not only more frequently but for longer terms. In reviewing each case, the Board must determine whether to (1) defer the parole decision to a future date, (2) require the inmate to "serve-out" the court imposed sentence, or (3) grant parole and allow the inmate to be released within the community. Once released, the inmate is subject to the supervision of parole officers. The most recent report reveals the dramatic increase in releases by the parole board. In fiscal year 1999-2000, the Board considered a total of 8,739 cases. Over 2,600 or 30% were granted parole. Forward to fiscal year 2005-2006, where the Board considered 15,135 inmates for release and granted parole to 43%--a whopping 13% increase in only five years! The increase in parolees has not been matched by a corresponding increase in parole officers. Thus, some suggest that parolees actually face less supervision from state parole officers than they did only a few years before. Because of this, courts are sometimes in a better situation to monitor a defendant who is likely to be granted an early release. In those instances where a defendant can be placed into an intensive supervision pro-

Misconceptions about library tax need to be cleared up...

Dear Editor,

There have been many misconceptions concerning the petition to increase funding for the Rockcastle County Public Library. I would like to attempt to address just a few of those items.

Many people in our county believe that our salaries are paid by the state. We receive $21,428 in state aid each year. Needless to say, this amount does not go far in paying salaries. We no longer receive books from the Department of Libraries in Frankfort nor do we receive a book grant from the state as we did in years past. The cost of books has not decreased over the years. The county does provide our building and pays half of the electric and water bill each month. This is certainly appreciated.

However, the library has ongoing monthly expenses such as trash pickup, workers comp insurance, bookmobile insurance, insurance on building contents, phone bill, gas and maintenance for the bookmobile, story hour supplies, salaries, etc. We are able to purchase most of our books from a book wholesaler at a discount, but this still runs into a large amount over a year's time. We subscribe to several periodicals and some of these are graciously paid for by Community Trust Bank and Farm Bureau. Some of them are purchased by the library.

Many in the community think we need a new bookmobile. This would certainly be nice. We received a grant application a few weeks ago. The match that we would have to provide was $25,000. This is almost one-fourth of our budget in a year's time. As many of you are aware, the minimum wage increases to $6.85 on July 1, 2008. Our employees will have to be paid this amount.

Your public library has nine public access computers. We make copies for a small fee. We also provide FAX service for the public for a small fee and have tax forms from January-April. We now have a microfilm reader that will copy. We still have some genealogy materials housed in the library and we are open 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday-Friday and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday.

Yes, your Rockcastle County Public Library is asking for a tax increase. We need this increase to continue operating your library and bookmobile in the way that it has been. Many of you believe that we are asking for this tax increase to build a new building. If you were here on Tuesdays, at story hour, and saw the 18-25 children and parents, you would see the need "down the road." When we have a special program, we definitely could use more space. However, we are not asking for the tax increase to build a building.

Jackson, Laurel, Pulaski and Madison counties have all either built, or are in the process of building, new libraries. Laurel, Madison and Pulaski libraries receive over one million dollars in tax money each year and over twice as much state aid as we receive in Rockcastle County. Jackson County receives about a thousand dollars less in state aid, but their library tax is 7.4 cents per $100. We are asking you to sign our petition to raise your property tax to 4.8 pennies per $100.

Please consider signing our petition if you are a registered voter in Rockcastle County. We want to continue to provide quality services to you, the people of our county, and to the young people, the future of our county! You should want this too!

Sincerely, Pamela R. Chaliff Library Director and Bookmobile Coordinator to go home. Pop stopped the car in front of the house to let us out. While we went inside and turned on the lights, he put the car in the garage. As soon as Pop came into the house, I knew he was headed for his big chair for a nap. I can see him now, with his Stetson pulled over his face leaning back in his chair snoring!

Mommie turned on the TV, and she and I settled in for an exciting late night of TV. She loved old movies and I loved watching them with her.

I am sure that most of this sounds just too tame and uninteresting for most people today. But in 1951, it was a great evening of fun and relaxation. I guess it just goes to show how much the pace of life has changed since then.

buddies came back. By then he'd figured out that he could get 4 jigs out of one tail if he sliced them just right. Anyway, his buddies came Anyway, his buddles came back and Mike was already cooking squirrel. He said he didn't mention the squirrel tails until they'd eaten their fill and fed the camp owner's dog a heavy meal.

He said his buddies had brought back plenty buck tails but that the squirrel tails worked so much better that they wound up cooking over thirty squirrels before the week was over and that the dog was so taken with them that as soon as they came off the lake he'd already be barking at one he'd treed when he heard the boat coming and was waiting for Mike to shoot it out.

My buddy, Rufus Harrison, who lives on Woods Creek Lake there just north of London said the muskie tale, last week, was piddling at best to what he'd actually seen happen.

If you know anything about Woods Creek, then you know that it is famous for producing an abundance of huge flat head catfish.

Rufus said he was fishing one day near a stump bed and out near its edge a big acorn was lying right in the middle of a stump. Bout that time he noticed a squirrel hopping from stump to stump trying to get to the one that had the acorn on it and he finally made it. The squirrel grabbed the acorn and went to hop back to another stump on its way the woods when a huge catfish came straight up out of the lake and snatched the squirrel in mid air.

Rufus said it was an awful commotion and the splash actually rocked his boat. He figured nobody was going to believe him when he told the story.

Then about the time he was reeling in to move to another hole, he saw the water swirling around the stump and all of a sudden the same catfish came back up out of the water with an acorn in its mouth and proceeded to flip the nut so it landed right in the middle of the stump. Rufus said he was pretty sure it was the same acorn the squirrel had snatched.

Apparently muskie are not the only fish that enjoy eating squirrels but catfish obviously prefer their's fresher than road kill and are smart enough to make catching them easy.

If you have any other true fishing stories like this, please feel free to pass them along and I'll put em in the paper if they are absolute gospel and as believable as the ones you've just read.

gram, such as a drug court, the Courts can provide a greater level of community supervision.

For example, local drug courts require defendants to submit to three drug tests weekly. Defendants must also come to court every week, work full time, do community service, go to group and individual counseling, and do homework. The typical program lasts at least 18 months, and for some defendants, it takes much longer. Now that's supervision!

Sometimes, inmates who are requesting release by the Courts come to regret that choice. In many respects, it's far easier to serve a short prison sentence, be paroled, and avoid the intensive court supervised programs. Nevertheless, the Parole Board fulfills an important function in an area subject to both intense public criticism and an ever expanding prison population.

"What Is Written"

We read in Eph.1:21-23, "Far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come: And hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the church, Which is his body, the fulness of him that filleth all in all." It should be clear from this passage that the head of the Lord's church is Jesus Christ. The pope of Rome is not the head of the church, contrary to what our Roman Catholic friends would like us to believe. Nor is the pope the vicar of Christ, one who stands in the stead of Christ. The councils and conventions of men who stand as the head of denominational churches, voting on the will of God (e.g., voting on whether homosexuality is acceptable to God), are they the head of the church? No! Jesus Christ is the absolute monarch in the kingdom of God, his church. It makes one sick to see the denominational dogma that is promoted, as if this represents Christianity. Only when we let Jesus be the absolute ruler and authority, can find the peace that comes from above. Yes, Jesus is Lord and Master. And his will, is expressed in the Bible.

$20,000 approved for Rockcastle County in Development Funds

The Kentucky Agricultural Development Board, chaired by Governor Ernie Fletcher, $20,000 approved in Rockcastle County funds at their monthly meeting in support of a menu approach for two model programs. The Rockcastle County Conservation District submitted proposals for cost-share assistance to the Rockcastle County Agricultural Development Council and the Kentucky Agricultural Development Board.

The two model programs include:

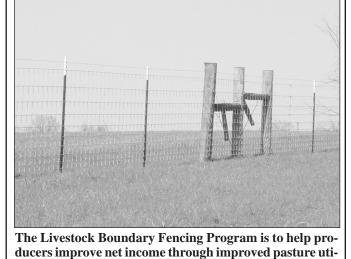

The Agricultural Diversification Program offers costshare assistance with individual producers seeking to diversify production. The main goal of this program is to improve net farm income through development and expansion of new agricultural products and through the development of new ways of working with existing agricultural commodities.

The Dairy Diversification Program encourages and assists existing and new dairy producers throughout the Commonwealth for construction, renovation, or modernization of existing dairy facilities.

Governor Fletcher and the Kentucky Legislature continue to make great strides toward lessening Kentucky's dependence on tobacco production while revitalizing the farm economy by investing 50 percent of Kentucky's Master Settlement Agreement into the Kentucky Agricultural Development Fund. To date, Kentucky has invested more than $252 million to an array of county, regional and state projects designed to increase net farm income and create sustainable new farm-based business enterprises. The Rockcastle County diversification programs represent more than 3,075 projects that have been funded through Agricultural Development Fund, since January 2001. For more information about the sign-up period and the guidelines for programs administered by the Rockcastle County Conservation District, at (606) 256-2525. Rockcastle County Extension Office

The Rockcastle Cattlemen's Association and local Agriculture Leadership are taking applications for 2007 Phase I Cost Share Programs. Programs offered include the Livestock Boundary Fencing, Dairy Diversification / Agr-Tourism / Commercial Horticulture.

Applications are available at the Rockcastle County Extension Office on West Main Street from 8-4:30pm. Dead line for completing an application is Wednesday, October 31, 2007. Applications will be scored by a survey on production information to generate a ranking. Funds may not be available to assist all applicants and will be awarded from the ranking system.

The Livestock Boundary Fencing Program is to help producers improve net income through improved pasture utilization. Also to improve utilization of previously unproductive farm land allowing for increased herd size. New fencing must be property boundary or road way boundary. Interior or cross fencing is not part of this program. An FSA farm photo must be included with application designating fence location.

Eligible Cost Share items include pressure treated wood or metal post, wire including woven, high tensil or barbed plus labor. Consult the application for complete program guidelines.

Dairy Diversification Cost Share is to help Dairy farmers improve their facilities. For a complete listing of eligible cost share items, please consult the application.

Agr. Tourism and Commercial Horticulture are for producers wishing to expand current practices. Also please see applications for details.

All Cost Share Programs are on a 50/50 reimbursement basis. Approved applicants submit proof of expenses and project completion before receiving reimbursement Cost Share. The Rockcastle Conservation District will be handling financial reimbursement once applicants have completed all paperwork.

In Loving Memory

A Mother

Bessie Owens was a lady, And she went to church with me.

Never failing in her duty, Being all we ought to be.

She was a loving Mother, And she worked till it was done.

She taught them like she did her own,

Her work was not yet done.

And in church on Sunday morning,

She raised a precious family,

Big Mama to her grandkids,

She loved them every one.

Two daughters and a son.

I could see her smiling face, With her courage never failing, As we sang Amazing Grace.

Then a sickness came upon her, Like the lightening from the sky,

Thought it left her weak and crippled,

Never once she wondered why.

Now this flower will bloom forever,

For the journey she has made., To a garden filled with beauty, Where the roses never fade. Written By: Rose Helen McFerron A tribute to the life of Bessie

Patriots spoil homecoming 12-2 Lincoln hands Rockets third straight defeat

By: Richard Anderkin

The Rockcastle County Rockets are now 3 and 3 on the season after a 12-2 loss on Friday night to the visiting Lincoln County Patriots.

The Rocket offense has now failed to score a point in the last three games, after going scoreless again on Friday night.

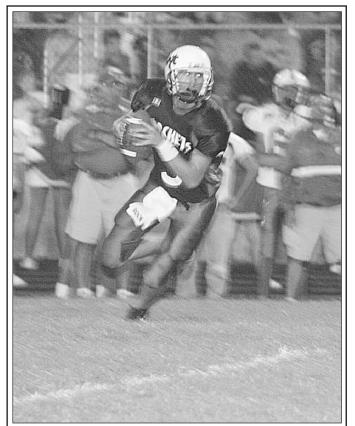

The Rockets only two points scored in the last three games came on a safety in the first period Friday night when junior Casey Hayes sacked the Patriot quarterback in the end zone in the first period.

Both of Lincoln County's scores came in the first half as well. After falling behind 2-0, the Patriots scored on a six yard run with 6:36 minutes left in the half. Then, with just 19 seconds left in the half, the Patriots picked off a Rocket pass and returned it 56 yards for the score. The Patriots failed on both extra point conversions.

Neither the Rockets or the Patriots could get much done on offense with the ROCK gaining only 113 yards on the night and the Patriots managing only 132.

Sophomore quarterback Dustin Bishop had a tough night, completing only five passes on 14 attempts for 38 yards and he threw two interceptions. He rushed the ball four times for six vards.

Before being hurt late in the game, Casey Hayes had 57 yards on 15 carries, sophomore Dakota McFerron got 10 yards on four carries and juniors Cody Mize and Shawn McHone each picked up only two yards.

Senior Zack Burkhart caught two passes for 23 yards, sophomore Jamie Todd had two catches for five yards and senior Abe Kirby caught one pass for ten yards.

Hayes led the defense with the safety, 11 tackles and assists and 2 sacks.

Burkhart also had 11 tackles and assists, junior Steve Trimble had eight tackles and assists and senior Brian Mize had six tackles and assists.

Senior Scott Daughtery had four tackles and a sack. Shawn McHone also had four tackles and assists and two sacks and Abe Kirby had three tackles and assists and recovered a Patriot fumble.

Junior Devon Mason had three tackles and assists, as did junior Dustin Bullock. Senior Trenidy Coffey had two tackles and sophomore Cole Abney, Cody Mize and sophomore Matt Bullens got one each.

Rockcastle head coach Tom Larkey, who had not lost three straight games in his 23 years at the ROCK until this season, said this week he was very discouraged to go three games with the offense not scoring. "I guess if you hang around long enough, things like that will happen," Larkey said.

"We will continue to strive for a higher level of concentration in practice this week on the offensive line but, in all fairness to our players, they did a better job on the offensive line this week than against Knox Central," Larkey said.

"Scott, (Daughtery), had a great game at times but he, and the rest of our offense, have a lot of work to do. We simply have got to do better on fundamentals and knowledge of our Rocket junior running back Casey Hayes looks for running room behind fullback Shawn McHone on Friday night. Hayes, who was injured late in the game, gained 57yards on 15 carries. Hayes was taken from the field by ambulance and treated at the Rockcastle Hospital and released early Saturday morning. Hayes will play Friday night against McCreary (Sports photos by Richard Anderkin) Central.

The RCHS Marching Band performed at half-time of the Rocket/Lincoln County game last Friday night. The marching Rockets have done very well in competition this season with a first place for the band and best color guard at the Powell County Invitational and a second place finish at the Pride of the Cumberlands in Middlesboro over the weekend. The marching Rockets are the defending champions of class 3A east regional. This year's regional competion is Saturday, October 13th at Rowan County High School. Shown above from left are: Andrea Gonzalez, April Johnson, Nicole McFerron and Tara Baldwin.

Senior Abe Kirby #7, and other Rockets, give chase to a Lincoln County running back on Friday night. The ROCK defense played extremely well, giving up only 132 yards to the Patriots. The ROCK fell to 3 and 3 on the season with the 12-2 loss.

Rocket trainer Sheri McNew examines running back Casey Hayes before he is taken to the Rockcastle Hospital by ambulance. Hayes was treated and released from the hospital later that night and will play this week.

Larkey said that sophomore running back Dakota McFerron would see more action after a good game on Friday night.

"He came in and ran the ball well for us and earned himself some more playing time," the coach added.

"We moved the ball up the field at times but we are obviously having trouble getting into the end zone, and that too is being addressed," he said.

In all fairness to the ROCK's lackluster offense, Lincoln County is ranked fifth in class 5A in fewest points allowed, giving up only 82 in six games this season. Of those 82, Bell County and Southwestern sc ored a combined 55 on the Patriots.

As for the ROCK's defense, Larkey said he was real pleased with the way the defensive unit played against Lincoln County.

"It looked like 'jail break' every play, they really got after Lincoln County and were exciting to watch," Larkey said.

For the Rockets to finish third in the district they must defeat McCreary Central on Thursday night.

Central has won only two games this season, but one of those was a district win over Madison Southern, 16-14, two weeks ago. Central's only other win was against Clinton County in week one.

If the Rockets do beat McCreary Central, they will finish third in the district and travel to Knox Central for the first round of the district playoffs. It will be the first time in 17 years that the ROCK has not hosted a first round district playoff game.

"We have played some very tough competition in the last three weeks but it will make us better when play-off time rolls around," Larkey said.

"If we go back to Knox Cen-

Rocket head assistant coach Tony Saylor made a rare appearance on the field during the game on Friday night. The coach came out of the booth before the game was over to talk to some members of the defensive unit. The scoreboard in the background tells the story. The Rockets dropped their third straight game for the first time since Saylor and head coach Tom Larkey have been coaching together at the ROCK.

Golf team advances in state tourney

The Rockcastle County High School boys' golf team made the cut on Tuesday and advanced to the championship round of the state golf tournament in Bowling Green.

The Rockets finished 12th of 24 teams on Tuesday to advance to Wednesday's final round.

South Laurel, who defeated the Rockets in the 10th region last week, finished 18th and did not make the cut.

As a team the Rockeys shot a 33 over par 321 on Tuesday.

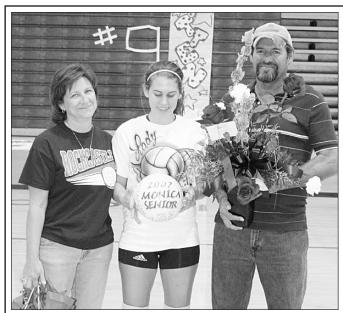

Junior Bryan Clontz led the Rockets with a four over par 76, junior Jordan Cash was one behind Clontz with a 77, senior Jake Woodall shot 83, sophomore Brandon Young 85 and sophomore Andrew Pensol shot a 92.

The Rockets, who are only the third RCHS team to ever make it to the state, are 26 shots behind number one Bowling Green, the host team who shot a 295.

Congratulations are in order for Elizabeth "Beth" and Celine Potter for their academic and creative achievements. Both girls are currently being homeschooled hrough Midwest Christian Academy and are maintaining an "A" average. If they were in the public school system, their averages would have qualified them for the honor roll. In addition, the homeschool curriculum allows them to advance at their own pace. Having studied through the summer and exhibiting an extraordinary work ethic, the girls are actually ahead of where they're expected to be. Beth is on course to an early graduation and college entry (Celine is in seventh grade).

In addition to excelling in their homeschooled environment, Beth and Celine continue to be active in their church's youth group, Celine is GAs and Beth is Acteens. The girls also pursue their own creative avenues. Beth is a talented artist and Celine is quite a poet. The following is one of her poems. The girls come from a very talented and creative family and neither of them is any exception.

Celine and Beth make their family very proud and are wonderful examples of homeschooling "done right". Keep up the good work, girls!!! Julie Taylor

Yards to Paradise

By Max Phelps Sit a Spell

Be it a peaceful afternoon or a break from chores or a long day at the office, taking a seat in the outdoors can be a real relief. A shady nook, a seat beside a brook, or a hammock on a hill or under a large tree...or my favorite, an Adirondack chair: there is an almost irresistible lure to sit a spell when the atmosphere is right and the seat is inviting.

So many homeowners have been dreaming of or even building outdoor living areas, not just a BBQ or a hot tub. Fold up vinyl laced lawn chairs aren't good enough anymore. It's the love seat of waterproof material, stone bench, comfortpadded chair, able hassock ... anything upscale, durable, and comfortable.

People are building patios, decks, waterfeatures...and ofcourse seating is needed for resting, for entertaining, or even just for appearances sake.

Modern outdoor living rooms, kitchens, breakfast nooks, beg for some nice seating. (And, dragging out furniture from storage, unfolding chairs, taking off covers, etc., is not in style these days.)

And, if the backyard cost twenty or forty thousand dollars, why save twenty-five dollars on a cheap seat?

If you are thinking of lounging around during cool fall or spring days, a new hammock, lounger, love seat or classy chair may be called for. If there's someone special you hope to be sitting a spell with, then by all means, make a way for others to join as you sit down and enjoy your backyard paradise!

Stones, natural boulders, carved rocks, and even benches made from chopped or "guillotined" slabs of stone, can lend a sturdy and attractive look...but may not be as comfortable as some padded chairs.

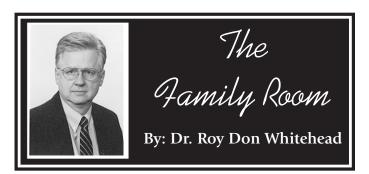

Now, nobody pays me to brag on their product, so you will have to look, shop, search for the outdoor furnishing that you dream of for your place. I do not like to recommend brands or lines of products.

(I do encourage shopping for local items when possible, rather than buying items imported by "big box stores".)

Enough of my missives, go sit a spell! (And if you don't have a chair that's comfy and in style, go shopping!)

saw that everything was ready. Dinner had to be on the table the minute he got home or there would be trouble. The biscuits would be done in two minutes and the table was set. She had made his favorite - fried chicken and mashed potatoes.

The knot in her stomach grew larger as the clock inched toward 5:00. Having been married to him for ten years, she thought she ought to be used to this by now, but she had never grown accustomed to the tension. If anything, the knots in her stomach were worse than they used to be. Her doctor had given her medication to calm her stomach, but it was not helping. This was the third medication the doctor had tried, and he was puzzled as to why none of them helped. She had not told him about her husband.

Finally, she heard the car in the driveway. She took the biscuits out of the oven and put the meat and vegetables on the table. She checked herself in the mirror. With no makeup (he would not allow her to wear any), she did not like what she saw. She decided he was right when he told her no other man would have her Besides how could she support herself and the children? She knew she had to stay with him.

The car door slammed hard. That was not a good sign. As the door opened she greeted him with a smile and asked about his day. He grunted and headed to the bathroom. She called the children for dinner and reminded them to behave themselves, because Daddy had a hard day at work.

He entered the kitchen, sat down and began to eat. The children ate quietly, never looking up from their plates. He commented that the chicken was dry, and she apologized. He also told her there were lumps in the mashed potatoes. Her oldest said she liked the potatoes just the way they were. He told her to shut up and eat.

Suddenly he stood up and threw his plate on the floor. He said he was not going to eat this slop and ordered the kids to go to their rooms. She began to clean up the mess on the floor. He told her to leave it, and maybe the dog would eat it, though he doubted even a dog would want it.

She began to cry without making a sound. He told her that she was a big baby and should just grow up. She started to stand and he pushed her to the floor. She curled up in a fetal position as he began to kick her. She had endured this many times before and just lay there as he kept on kicking. She knew the bruises would come tomorrow and last for a week. She just hoped the kids would stay in their rooms and not see what he was doing to her.

I can't believe I'm in the doghouse again! Well, not my real doghouse, but my personal time-out corner I sit in when foolishness gets the best of me! You would think I'd learn to follow the rules, but many times my mischievous ways overtake sensible thinking. When that happens, I hear my full name, find myself in the corner, and head to bed without dessert!

Where are my manners? Let me introduce myself. My name is Dogwood, but everyone calls me Woody. I'm an eight-yearold black and tan miniature dachshund (or wiener dog) from Kentucky (Making me 'Woody, The Kentucky Wiener!"). Being the runt of the litter or underdog, the owner of that Kentucky tobacco farm said I wouldn't amount to anything. That all changed the morning a lady and her one-year old redheaded miniature dachshund appeared. The lady scooped me up and we instantly fell in love. Mom and the other wiener dog (Chloe, who's now my sister) took me outside, gave me a name, and the rest, as they say, is history!

Our family has grown to include Dad (a human), two brothers (Rio, a Labrador, and Little Bit, a cat) and two sisters (Cheyenne, another Labrador, and Dolly, another cat). Even though there is plenty of barking, meowing, chasing and fetching, there's also work to do. We call it teamwork! You see, mom writes books about us. Not only did people read the books, but also my phone started ringing. "Woody, can you come to our school and talk about dreams, goals and hard work?" As an underdog, I knew about those things. Dad always says we can achieve, with work hard. "It doesn't matter that you're little," dad says, "it's your attitude and work ethic that count, so work and dream like a big dog!" While mom, dad, Chloe and I travel to schools, our siblings watch over the home place, keeping the lions, tigers and bears at bay! We've never seen a lion, tiger, or bear in the neighborhood!) In fact, we've been so busy that we haven't taken a vacation in years. Imagine our surprise when dad said he was treating mom, Chloe and me to a vacation! "Where?" Chloe and I barked. "Washington D.C.-our nation's capitol!" Dad replied. We were PAWS-atively thrilled! We've been planning our route, packing our Scooby suitcase, and counting the days before we head east! Dad bought us a coloring book of D.C. It has pictures of well-known monuments. Everyone knows how much Chloe and I love to color, so we've been spending our free time coloring the stately buildings, trying our best to stay between the lines. Dad was sure the book would help us prepare for our trip. What he didn't count on was that my love of art would land me in the doghouse! Mom told us we couldn't play until we picked up our toys and brushed our teeth. "Then you can have free time," mom said. "And Woody, no more coloring until you've completed your chores!" "Yes Ma'am!" I answered, fully intending to obey, but what would it hurt if I finished my masterpiece? "Just a few more minutes and then I'll start my chores," I thought.

derstand once she saw my stunning portrayal of the Washington Monument. Wrong! What mom saw was scattered toys and food stuck between my teeth from lunch. The next thing I knew, mom called me Dogwood and ordered me to obey at once. She didn't have to tell me twice! Once I accomplished the task, mom scooped me up, just like she did that spring day eight years earlier, and gave me a kiss. "I love you, Woody. You're a sweet little boy, but you must follow rules! You know what this means, don't you? You must sit in the corner and think about your actions - and no dessert either." After a few more hugs, kisses, and tears (sniff, sniff), I found my way to my familiar corner. So, here I am, realizing I've been selfish. My parents are taking Chloe and me on dream vacation - Washington D.C. - and I can't even mind my manners. I can't wait until mom returns so I can tell her again how sorry I am. While I'm waiting, I think I'll close my eyes (yawn) and imagine the Capital City. See what happens next time when our paws hit the ground in D.C. Will we meet the President? I'll keep you posted. In the meantime, remember to obey your parents and work and dream like a big dog! Woody, a k a Mr. Dogwood

Do you know? The Mystery of Migration

Fall, with cooler weather triggering the trees to change colors and to fall off, also triggers another phenomenon of nature. Fall is the time for birds to migrate. Millions of birds are in the transition between their summer and winter homes. In the northern hemisphere, birds are migrating south and in the southern hemisphere, they are flying north in preparation for winter here, and summer there.

According to scientists with the Audubon Society, migration for some species of birds is just several hundred miles, while others make an incredible journey. The Artic Tern has the longest route, traveling from the South Pole during our winter, to the North Pole during our summer. The amazing tiny humming birds travel from the central regions of South America during our winter, to the United States during our summers. Scientists have wondered what forces will trigger migration for hundreds of years. The biggest influence for triggering migration tends to be weather conditions. Ornithologists have observed solitary birds beginning to "flock-up" as the seasonal change approaches. The flocks will grow from a few birds to hundreds of thousands over a short period of time, but only when the weather conditions are right. At the Cornell University Ornithology Department, scientists have discovered that just as long-term changes in climate have molded the evolution of bird migration, seasonal and day-to-day changes in weather dramatically influence the timing and course of migration. When the weather conditions are right, the number of birds in flight can reach millions. Not only are the immediate flight conditions important, but the weather at the destination or starting point of the flight may also be critical to a bird's survival. For example, water birds must not arrive at northern latitudes before the ice has melted, and many tend to follow the spring thaw northward; in late fall many linger in the north until freezing temperatures force them to move. For most birds, however, it pays to anticipate seasonal changes in climate and to be gone well before conditions deteriorate. Many warblers, flycatchers, and other insect eaters begin their fall migration in late summer while the days are still warm and the insect life abundant. Ornithologists have discovered that during migration, the most critical weather factors are wind direction and changes in temperature. In spring, northbound birds select the warming temperatures and southerly winds that characterize the western side of highpressure systems; in fall, they favor the lower temperatures and north winds that occur following the passage of a cold rainy, overcast weather, fog, and high winds, and even stop in the middle of their journey if they encounter deteriorating weather while over land. Recent research has shown that are evident.

pigeons are quite sensitive to small changes in air pressure; birds are able to anticipate weather before any overt signs When are the conditions right for migration? The winds must be blowing in the direction that the birds want to go. Birds will usually wait until the most favorable weather conditions then set off on their journey. Ornithologists watch the weather to help predict when large numbers of birds will be passing through their area. The passage of a strong cold front in early September usually triggers the start of fall migration. A strong wind in the right direction will speed the birds on their way. If there are strong headwinds, the birds' speed will be greatly reduced, therefore it will need more fat reserves to travel the same distance. Many birds that encounter storms and strong headwinds perish into the seas. If these weary birds are over land, they will drop down and land, find food and rest before continuing.

The route that some birds instinctively take may seem strange until you look at the winds. For instance, many birds on the east coast of the U.S., head out to the Atlantic during a fall cold front. The northwest winds take them on a southeastern course over Bermuda and beyond. Then they meet the northeast trade winds and make it to South America. This unbelievable journey will take them over 1,800 miles of water and will last over 80 hours. But it is actually easier for them than the land route along the coast, down through Central America, and then onto their destination in South America. The winds are the key factor here.

Flapping of wings uses quite a bit of their stored energy, therefore, many birds, especially the larger ones, will soar and glide as much as possible, using the winds and thermals. However, the journey will take longer than if the migration was made by more flapping flight. Spectacular kettles of hawks are seen at various places where thousands of hawks climb to the greatest height possible then glide and ride the thermals, soaring without flapping for great distances.

How high do birds fly during migration? Pilots have reported seeing birds as high as 26,000 feet! Cornell University scientists report that a bird's lungs are different than human's so the colder air at these high altitudes actually helps the birds. However, most birds fly less than 3,000 feet in the air.

Chloe was minding mom, explaining that I better obey too, yet I was sure mom would unWoody, the Kentucky wiener dog, and his family are anxious to be on the road, this time to Washington, D.C. Plenty of adventures are in store and, as usual, Woody manages to find himself in the doghouse.

them in any way they can," he said.

"Certainly we are going to celebrate our success some, but we can't rest, we will continue to work hard," he added.

The best test scores in the county were again at Brodhead Elementary where students scored 103.6. However this year's mark at Brodhead was nearly eight points lower than a year ago.

At Roundstone Elementary, School test scores were also very good with students scoring a 99.4. But, they too, went backwards from a year ago but by only .6 of a point.

All three elementary schools scored at least 12 points above the state average of 87.7.

Even with all of the problems at the Rockcastle County Middle School during testing last Spring, their scores still increased from a year ago.

RCMS scored 89.4 compared to 88.1 a year ago and are only one of 33 middle schools in the state to have an academic index in the 90s, finishing in the top 11 percent in the state.

"I think those results say a lot about the staff, students and parents involved in the educational process at our school. They all pulled together after the fire and the level of cooperation was absolutely overwhelming, which is obvious by our scores," said principal Jason Coguer.

Students at RCMS were moved to other schools, after three middle school students set fire to the school during the first week of testing in April, and closed out the school year at the four other schools in the county.

Middle school students completed their 2007 testing at the other schools with the help of the staff and administrators at each school. "Everyone at the other schools welcomed us with open arms and helped our students and staff in every way possible, I want to personally thank them," Coguer said.

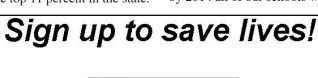

The middle school score of 89.4 was ten points higher than the state average of 79.0.

The worst scores in the county were again at Rockcastle County High School where students scored 76.7 compared to 80.1 a year ago.

However the 76.7 is still higher than the state average of 74.9

"I am pleased with our continuing effort to provide the best possible education to the students of the county," said Rockcastle School Superintendent Larry Hammond.

"As usual we've got areas that need a lot work, but that work is underway and I think by 2014 all of our schools will be where they are supposed to be, that being ranked as proficient or scoring a 100 or better on their tests in each subject area at every school," he said.

"Overall our scores were good even with all of the changes made to the test to bring the CATS more in line with federal requirements," Hammond said.

"The staff at RCHS. where scores continue to lag is hard at work to meet their goals and move toward meeting the goal set for 2014, and I think they will make it. They know the task at hand and have accepted the challenge," Hammond said.

Last year, the high school scored higher than the state average in only two of seven subject areas, with their worst scores being in Math and Science.

The Rockcastle School system continues to be one of the most respected in the state, being ranked 18th in the state in 2005, 15th last year and 21st this year.

Of the top 21 school districts in the state, Rockcastle ranked tenth among county systems in the state.

The number one ranked county system was Hancock County and the number one ranked independent school was Anchorage, an elementary school, which was also the number one ranked school district overall.

One man's story of 27 years of addiction

"Submitted"

I am willing to share this story, because I don't want to see other people go down the same road. There are so many young people who are starting down the same road that I feel if they can see what happened to me, maybe they'll not start drinking and drugin.

I will start at the age of 13. But I know I had been drunk before then. When I was 13 I was arrested for alcohol intoxication and spent the night in jail. I was released the next day. Then being arrested seemed to happen more often as the years went on. I started taking nerve pills and drinking a lot more after my brother died from a gun shot to the head. I had just turned 18 years old. My alcohol and drugs were a way to escape the reality of my brother's death.

I also became very violent when I was drinking and taking the pills. I also found myself facing more serious charges when I was arrested. Assaults, wanton endangerment and also theft. This had become a way of life to pay for the habits I had. I had several different jobs but my habits seemed to be more important to me. I also had a lot of hate built up inside and drinking and doing drugs was the only way I thought I could deal with life.

I was soon facing time in prison over a burglary and assault and a few other charges. I was sentenced to three years. The time spent didn't affect my habits. As it has been said I went to prison an addict and came out a worse addict. When I was released I did ever more drinking and drugs. That is the most common story I hear from people who have gone to prison, in an addict, out an addict.

I started even doing harder drugs such as cocaine, LSD and meth amphetamines. I still found myself not caring about life, mine or anyone else's. I managed to stay free for about 6 months. Then I got arrested for a D.U. I. and several assault charges including assault on a police officer. But I still didn't care about what was going to happen to me.

I was so deep into the abuse of drugs and alcohol by this time jail had become a way of life for me. We found out that my father had cancer. My parents had been through so much after my brother's death and it was just another sad time. I was in prison and had other pending charges when I got out. Eventually a kind judge gave me a bond so I could be with my dad. I did stop drinking like my dad ask, but I did a lot more drugs.

When my dad died, I had to go back to jail. My mom got sick and I got out and stayed sober a short time to be with her. But it didn't take long and I was back at my addictions.

While I was free a short time I had a terrible accident that crushed my arm and made me feel more useless. The addictions did not slow down. I got a big check from the settlement of the accident and instead of seeking help for myself I went on a 3 month binge of cocaine, xanax and vodka. I got into more trouble but had some bond money to stay out of jail.

I had another accident and almost died. Well, I tried to stay sober, but if you've never been there, you'll never know how an addiction destroys you.

Alcohol, drugs, pain, jail, prison and heartbreak is all I seem to know. There is much more I could tell you. I know it's been a wild ride for 27 years, but I also know other people who have been through the same thing. Believe me, there are many addicts much like me.

In a way, I am more comfortable here in jail. I may have become institutionalized because of my addictions.

But here I've also heard another message. I know the problem is mine, but I have a glimmer of hope now that I can live sober. I have to meet it head on because I don't want the rest of my life to be like the last 27 years.

I now know I can't do it alone, that there are people out there who will help me in the recovery community and that I am going to have to really deal with my own personal spirituality.

Livingston Mayor J.C. Griffin looks over a map of the Crooked Creek watershed area in the Daniel Boone National Forest in Rockcastle County at an Open House at the Livingston gym last Thursday. Helping the Mayor was Mary M. White, with the US Forest Service. The Open House was held to give forest users, and adjacent land owners, an opporunity to provide information about the area and discuss the current conditions of the vegetation, riparian areas, roads, trails, recreation facilities and other resources.

Several people, including Bruce Wynn, left and "Hoss" Hurley attended an Open House at the Livingston gym on Thursday to discuss future plans for the Crooked Creek watershed area in the Daniel Boone National Forest in Rockcastle County. Answering questions for the two was Mary M. White, with the Forest Service. (Photos by: Richard Anderkin).

Scott Anglin, left, was one of many who attended an Open House at the Livingston gym last Thursday, sponsored by the US Forest Service. Anglin's family owns property near the Daniel Boone National Forest in Rockcastle and Jackson counties. The meeting was held to gain public comment on future management of the Crooked Creek watershed area in the forest. Helping Anglin was Jay Snider with the US Forest Service.

October 27th Mullins to be honored at LHS Reunion

Mr. Virgil Mullins will be inducted into the Livingston School Hall of Fame at the annual school reunion on October 27th. Mr. Mullins is being recognized for his service as a bus driver for Livingston School and member of the Rockcastle County Board of Education.

The annual reunion will be held in the Preston Parrett Gym at Livingston.

All former students, teachers, and staff are invited to attend. Additional information is available from members of the Planning Committee Dianna F. Bradley, Aletha P. Bryant, Carcille С. Burchette, Barbara M. Castleberry, Barbara P. Fain, Junior and Jan K. Owens, Paul and Patti F. Ponder, and Retha F. Thompson. The registration deadline is October 15th.

Several local residents and county officials attended an Open House at the Livingston gym last Thursday. The event was sponsored by the US Forest Service to obtain public input on future management activities of the Crooked Creek watershed area in the Daniel Boone National Forest in Rockcastle County. Above, right, Rockcastle Judge Executive Buzz Carloftis talks with John Strojan, who heads the London Ranger District.

October is Breast Cancer Awareness Month

According to the American Cancer Society, if detected early the five-year survival rate for breast cancer is 96%. Research suggests a routine mammogram can detect 40% of all cancers not found through an examination by your physician.

Rockcastle Hospital Diagnostic Imaging is offering a reduced rate on mammograms during the month of October.

To schedule a mammogram, call (606) 256-7878.

Fishing pole in hand, a smile in your heart

Five-year-old Addisson's eyes light up as she sits next to her Grandpa Charles at the edge of the pond. The bobber attached to her child-size pole goes beneath the surface of the water indicating she's got a bite. A couple of squeals and a few seconds later, an eight pound fish emerged from the water, hooked to the little girl's pole. The fish was so heavy it snapped the little girl's fishing line in two. The joy of the child and her grandfather wasn't dampened by the broken line; they were happy with the catch.

Fishing trips with the catch. Fishing trips with grandchildren and grandparents aren't uncommon. However, Addisson's grandfather is a resident of Rockcastle Health and Rehabilitation Center. Thanks to Sonny and Mary Napier, Addisson and her grandfather are able to make these fishing trips.

Since 2002, the Napiers have opened up their property and their hearts for residents of Rockcastle Health and Rehabilitation Center. Twice a year, they welcome residents for a morning of fishing and fun. The Napiers supply all poles and bait. They also will bait the poles, and reel in the fish for residents and their families.

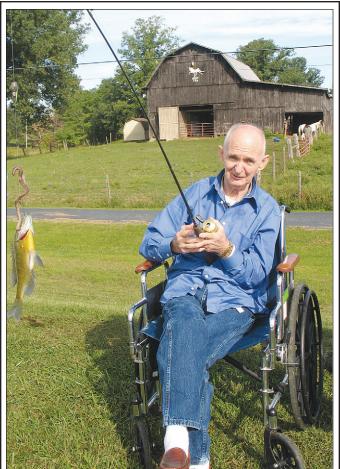

The Napiers became familiar with the residents of Rockcastle Heath and Rehabilitation Center when Sonny's sister-in-law became a resident. The fishing trips are just as enjoyable for the Napiers as well as the residents. "I enjoy doing it. The residents have a lot of fun. You would think they were in paradise," Sonny said. Sonny described a particular fishing trip when one resident caught a 20 inch fish and wanted to keep it. When Sonny asked him what he was going to do with it, the resident simply replied, 'Put it in my room."

"The Napiers have been great to us," said Steve Coy Rockcastle Heath and Rehabilitation Center administrator. He accompanied the residents on a fishing trip and saw what a great time everyone has. Coy added, "The residents get so excited. They look forward to this trip every year." Residents have the opportunity to go on one or two trips a month. Coy said in the near future he hopes to purchase a trip van so that more opportunities will be available for residents and waiting lists for trips can be eliminated. The Center currently relies on R-Tec.

Between 12 and 15 residents participate in the group outings. The fishing trip is a favorite of many residents who won't go on any other trips or participate in group activities. For some it is the beautiful scenery while for others it is an opportunity to do an activity they loved as a child. No matter why the residents go on the fishing trip, the genuine kindness the Napiers express means a lot to activity directory Sharon Cunigan. "Words cannot express how much I appreciate the Napiers. It's such a blessing."

Sherman McClure, a resident of Rockcastle Health and Rehab, enjoyed a day of fishing at the property of Sonny and Mary Napier.

Durham receives State Technology Award

Wesley Durham, 2007 Rockcastle County High School graduate, was recently honored at the Kentucky Library Association's Fall Conference in Louisville. Durham was named the state winner for the Student Technology Award, presented to one K-12 student annually in the state by the Kentucky School Media Association, the K-12 library media specialist division of the KLA. The winner is chosen by a panel of library media specialists across the state to recognize the student who has assisted his school and library media center with outstanding technology skills. Durham was nominated by Mrs. Janet Wells, Library Media Specialist at RCHS.

Ms. Carolyn Durham accompanied her son to the Awards Luncheon at the Louisville Downtown Marriott on Saturday, September 22, 2007. Ms. Melissa Gardner, Student Technology Award Committee Chairperson, presented Durham a check and read the nomination letter:

'Wesley Durham is the rare student who could get glowing recommendations from three principals, two counselors, one library media specialist, 70 faculty and staff members, and 800 fellow students for his knowledge of the school's technology system, his ability to explain things in everyday language, and his can-do attitude. Wesley has taken more computer courses (seven) than any other student in the history of this school, has received his A+ certification (a major marketing tool in the field), been awarded a Kentucky Occupational Skills Standard Achievement (KOSSA) certificate (an immediate job credential), and received numerous job offers before his graduation in May, 2007. He has worked with the School Technology Coordinator to keep the school's technology system running and was very confidential in his handling of passwords, in addition to the various troubleshooting he dealt with on a daily basis. He could be depended on to install hardware and software, train students and adults how to use various pieces of technology, and personally saved many portfolio pieces from contrary diskettes, CDs, and jump drives. In the library media center, he was in charge of updating the student workstations, in addition to keeping the circulation and cataloging software up to date. I, like the rest of the faculty, celebrated his graduation, realizing what an asset he had been to the school during the past four years. Many of the faculty members wonder what they will do when August arrives and Wesley is not here to answer a quick question or solve a software problem. He received a scholarship to Spencerian College to continue his studies in technology, with hopes to come back to the school system to continue working with the teachers and students in the future, as well as open his own business. I have no doubt he will be successful."

Wesley Durham receives the State Technology Award from Melissa Gardner, Awards Chairperson, at the Kentucky School Media Association's Luncheon in Louisville, Kentucky. Also pictured are: Fannie Cox, Kentucky Library Association President; Cathy Watson - Pittman Jefferson County Library Media Services; Laura Younkin, Library Media Specialist at Ballard High (Jefferson School County); and Darlah Carman-Zweifel, KSMA President.
