The process of replacing the 106-year-old truss railroad bridge over the Rockcastle River in Livingston is now complete. CSX crews completed the project this past weekend and the first train used the new ballast deck railroad bridge early Sunday morning. The aerial photo above was taken Saturday afternoon before CSX crews positioned the new Ballast Deck bridge. The bridge was replaced due to its age and for safety reasons.

Man accused of killing sister is found competent to stand trial

By: Doug Ponder

Circuit Court Judge David A. Tapp recently found an elderly man, charged with murdering his sister on a Rockcastle County roadway, competent to stand trial.

According to state police reports, Clyde White, 79, of Corbin was originally charged with murdering his sister Dorothy Whitaker, 83 of Lexington on August 29th of last year after he chased a van she was riding in along I-75 in Mt. Vernon. White's brother, Lawrence White, 82, of Lexington was the driver of the van that eventually wrecked on Hwy 461 in Mt. Vernon after Clyde White reportedly rammed it several times.

Both Lawrence White and Whitaker were airlifted from the scene to the UK Medical Center. Lawrence White was treated for minor nity to receive a $1.3 million loan from Jackson Energy at 0% interest. The money, which is given to Jackson Energy by the federal government, will be applied to the court's $3 million dollar loan which they took with 5/3 Bank to finance the purchase of the former Alcoa building, presently being leased by Anchor Packaging.

The court now pays 2.47% interest on the $3 million but it is a variable rate loan which means the top interest rate can go to 4.55% which would raise the county's monthly payment on the loan consider-

RCIDA Executive Director Holly Hopkins told the court that the money would be repaid to Jackson Energy over a 10 year period. However, according to federal policy, ownership of the facility must be transferred to the Rockcastle County Industrial Authority. In a memo issued after the meeting by County Judge/ Executive Buzz Carloftis, he noted that after the 10 year repayment period, the property could be returned to the county's ownership.

The matter will be taken up more fully at next Tuesday's regular meeting

Public meeting planned at Wildie PO for Oct. 12th

Discussions have been going on for some time about the fate of the post office at Wildie.

The Postal Service established a review process for certain post offices, known as the POST Plan, and the Wildie Post Office was among the offices evaluated under this plan's criteria.

Customers of the post office were recently sent a survey to help determine the best course of action for providing postal services to the community. The Postal Service will now use the results of that survey and a public meeting, scheduled for October 12th at 4 p.m. at the post office, to determine the facility's fate.

In the survey, customers were given several options for the post office. They •Keep the office open, based on actual office workload. In the case of the Wildie post office, hours would be reduced from six hours each week day to two hours per week day. Current Saturday hours will not change and access to delivery receptacles will not be impacted.

•Conduct a discontinuance study for the office for the office and offer roadside mailbox delivery. Retail and delivery service would be provided through a rural carrier. Mail delivery points will be established and customers can purchase most postal services through the carrier or other alternate access points.

•Conduct a discontinuance study for the office and find a suitable alternative location, operated by a contractor usually at a local business. When businesses are found that meet the cri-

woman charged with 726 counts of unlawful activity fraudulent checks. By: Doug Ponder

Mount Vernon

A Brodhead woman was arrested last Thursday morning and charged with 726 counts of unlawful activity while working as an assistant manager at the Mt. Vernon Cash Express.

According to Mt. Vernon police reports, Karen Ann Mink, 24, of Brodhead and former Cash Express manager Kim David were making fraudulent checks and fake loans on customers of the Mt. Vernon Cash Ex-

As a result of the fraudulent check scam, 78 fraudulent checks were issued, 78 false loan applications were made and the total amount of missing funds from the Mt. Vernon Cash Express was more than $43,000.

Assistant Police Chief Barry Adams began the investigation in February after Cash Express District Manager Lathisha Collinsworth told Adams that they suspected Mink and David were opening fake loans and making Collinsworth said they discovered the fraudulent activity after she completed audits on several delinquent accounts from the Mt. Vernon branch.

During the audits, Collinsworth noticed the background on the checks appeared blurry and that they didn't resemble other checks drawn on the banks or accounts used by the customers.

When Collinsworth asked David and Mink why the checks looked different, they both replied that they were new counter checks the banks were using to help prevent fraud. However, Collinsworth didn't believe their explanations since there were other counter checks in the check box that didn't resemble the fraudulent cashier checks.

Collinsworth then contacted the customers with the questionable delinquent accounts and many of them

Life-changing accident doesn't define local woman

Commuting Somerset to London after work became a mundane task for Somerset Community College Cosmetology Instructor Brandy Brock, of Brodhead, and driving "from point A to point B" was just a blur. But in 2007 at 4:30 p.m., the commute brought her life into sharper focus.

"It was a typical day," Brock said.

She called her daughter

(from work), and moments later, the person in front of her abruptly slammed on their breaks. Brock swerved her vehicle in a panic, clipping the car in front. With her seat belt unbuckled, her body flew from the car as it rolled across Ky. 80.

She laid in a field with brambles tangled in her hair as she saw people begin to stop on the highway and come to aid her. Meanwhile, Brock's husband, 15 minutes away to say, Tim, was six hours away at 'I'm on my way home work and said getting to her was the longest six hours of his life.

"The ambulance drivers didn't think I'd make it to Lexington (alive)," she said. "There were people that had stopped when I had wrecked who were praying all around me, rubbing my legs and praying out loud."

The helicopter landed onto the roadway and transported Brock to the University of Kentucky

ramblings... by; perlina m. anderkin

There are two things I have decided about myself, looking back over my 70 plus years -- I have always been afflicted with AD/HD and I am a "for show" housekeeper.

The conclusion about AD/HD has come about with more time to reflect. I always was quietly proud of my ability to multi-task, patting myself on the back often for accomplishing several tasks at the same time. However, as I have gotten older, I have decided that I am actually AD/HD (attention deficit/hyperactivity disorder) and was just not able to keep my attention on one task long enough to complete it without jumping to another.

As for the "for show" housekeeping that came about because as I have gotten older my housekeeping skills have deteriorated along with my youth. I always managed to keep my house clean enough to keep the health department from shutting me down but lately, I have decided I don't really care if they do.

I think the "for show" part was because I also always managed to keep it just clean enough that if company showed up, or the children's friends came by, they wouldn't flinch and refuse to touch anything while on the premises.

Although there was the one occasion when Travis had brought a friend home for a snack before a game and I filled a plate for him and told him to warm it in the microwave. Well, when he opened the door, and immediately shut it, saying the food didn't really need warmed, I was surprised. Of course later, I opened my microwave and suddenly remembered that most of the last piece of cherry pie I had exploded, because I set the timer for too long, was still decorating the inside of the microwave, I understood his reluctance to put his food in My housekeeping effort is now tempered by a "whatever" attitude. My dogs and I are comfortable, most of the time, and when I get uncomfortable I manage to clear a path that keeps things relatively orderly for a few days. After all, my busy life requires my attention elsewhere. I have to work -- not really but go with me here -- I have house pets to take care of, I have to root the Reds on almost nightly and, the greatest burden, of course, trying to guide the future of our country.

Don't get mean with me, I don't actually think I have any influence on the future of our country. But, I can worry and nuzzle my worries like an old bone and pretend that will help to set things right again.

But, I don't want to have a second column in a row on my political viewpoints, especially since one of my children said, after last week's column, "Boy, you let everybody know how you feel about the election, didn't you?"

Of course, this same child should know by now that I have a bad habit of-thought entering head, thought expressed through

But, one more comment on the topic. Jamie, Allison and I ventured to Lexington recently to see "2016," a documentary on Pres. Obama's early upbringing and their influences on his idealogy. I already knew most of the information passed on but there were a few eye-opening revelations even for me. If you get a chance, go see it. It was, unexpectedly, a box office hit even with its limited release, leading the per screen takein of all movies showing by

Also, got to see comic Etta Mae recently at the Pioneer Playhouse. She was exceedingly funny but, at times, a little raunchier than I am used to. The audience loved her and, I'll admit, I

On Monday, I was invited to attend a dedication ceremony for a new piano at the Rockcastle Health and Rehabilitation Center in

The nursing home received the piano as a result of the hard work of Jesse Stallsworth, a local high school student, who took it upon himself to raise money for a new piano to replace the old one that was in poor

Stallsworth came up with the idea after visiting the nursing home regularly to play the old piano for the residents, including his grandmother. After noticing the piano was out of tune and extremely difficult to play, he decided to raise money for a new piano since the residents enjoyed listening to the music.

Through his efforts, Stallsworth raised over $5,000 for a new piano and received donations from people who lived as far away as Oneida, Tennessee.

The new piano was unveiled at the ceremony and Stallsworth played numerous hymns for the residents at the nursing home as they cheered him on in enjoy-

Paint Lick is the place you need to have in your plans for the coming weekend! On Friday evening and the main part of the day on Saturday, our little village will look like a bee hive getting ready to swarm.

Things get underway at 5:30 p.m. on Friday when the long awaited and brand new Paint Lick Community Arts Center celebrates its grand opening with a painting exhibit featuring students already enrolled in the Center's oil painting classes. The exhibit will also display work by other area artists and will run through October 27.

Friday evening, complete with free refreshments and live fiddle/banjo music, will mark the official opening of our wonderful Arts Center and the beginning of an ongoing series of classes, exhibits and special events far too numerous to describe in much detail in my little column. Twenty events or classes are scheduled to take place or begin in the next 30 days alone!

However I will plug the fact that, along with 5 other special events scheduled over the next month, yours truly will be featured in a special event billed as "An Evening with Ike Adams" at 6:00 p.m. on Thursday, October 11. I will be telling tales, mostly tongue-incheek, about growing up on Blair Branch, deep in the eastern Kentucky mountains in the 1950's and 60's and comparing life in the hills to life here in the flat lands. I promise to make you grin if you don't actually laugh out

For me, stories like Stallsworth's are a refreshing change from the negative stories I have to write about people who commit fraudulent acts or who are arrested for drugs.

When I write both positive and negative stories, I often feel like I have to write about two opposite ends of the spectrum of life.

Based on my experiences while working at the Signal, I have come to one simple conclusion. We all take different paths in life. We can individually choose to do good deeds or we can individually choose to do bad deeds

I have studied the numerous nature vs. nurture theories and all the debates that surround each of them. People who believe an individual's character is based off nature believe a person's behavior comes genetically from their family. People who believe an individual's character is based off nurture believe a person's behavior comes from their upbringing or personal experiences they have throughout their life.

Actually, I can supply examples that support both sides based on what I have seen and experienced from people I have had to write about since working at the

However, I believe it's a blend of both theories that have an influence on people and that there will always be exceptions to each of the theories. But in the end, I still believe the choice to do good deeds or bad deeds is up to each of us individu-

With that being said, we should all choose to do good deeds for others such as Stallsworth did for the residents at the nursing home. Because after all, the ultimate gift of life is giving to

In other Paint Lick news, it does not seem possible, at least to me, that the first Friends of Paint Lick (FOPL)Autumn Village Fest took place well over 20 years ago. Those of us who were around back then are mostly too old to remember whether or not it was in '88 or '89 but it has happened every year since just like it will again on Saturday.

There was a time when FOPL volunteers worried themselves sick for weeks on end, wringing their hands, recruiting vendors, arranging parking spots, scheduling musicians, and making sure every i was dotted and every t was crossed.

Finally, about ten years ago, someone suggested that we just spread the word, park a tobacco wagon for a stage, get out of the way and let it happen. That plan, or lack thereof, continues to work like a railroad watch. We just wind it up and let it

All I can promise you for this weekend is that there will be live music, soup beans, potato soup and cornbread a plenty on Saturday and that everybody is welcome to join in.

If you have food or anything else to sell off a table, pick-up truck bed or the trunk of your car, come on down and set up your show.

Plenty parking is available on a first-come/first served basis except for space that we have reserved for Paint Lick Christian Church and the FOPL volunteers who will be dishing up the aforementioned pinto beans and tater soup.

If you just want to come out, have a good time, maybe buy some stuff you didn't know you needed and enjoy some great hospitality, everything should be buzzing by 9:00 a.m. You may actually have to stop if you are travelling between Lancaster and Richmond on Highway 52! You will be glad you did and we'll be tickled to death to have you.

rocking chair in our home when I was about four years old. When it was too cold or too rainy to play outside, Bee selected a favorite book of hers, and together we rocked and read for hours. I can remember some of the titles of the books that we shared while sitting next to our big, old Warm Morning stove in the den of our small

It seems to me that we started our journey with the well known Uncle Remus series of folktales about Br'er Rabbit. He was a trickster who depended on his wits rather than brawn to succeed. The rabbit was known for bending the rules of authority figures and for re-arranging social mores as he saw fit. I loved the Uncle Remus series of stories.

Another favorite book of Bee's, and eventually mine, was Jack London's White Fang. London was an American author, journalist, and social activist. He wrote about the Klondike Gold Rush and adventures of the sled dogs of the Yukon Territory. White Fang is set in the late 19th-century and tells of a wild "wolf-dog's" journey to domestication. It details the dog's wild ancestry and how he learned to thrive in the wilderness. By the time Bee finished the book; I was hooked on London's works. I eventually read his The Call of the Wild on my own in high

Another book that I remember Bee reading to me was called Star, the Story of an Indian Pony. It was written in 1922 by Forrestine Hooker, who related a true story of a pony that took place during the southwest Indian wars. In this book, the ponies could talk to each other, making it even more fascinating. Bee had been an English teacher in the Rockcastle County School system in the early years of her adult life. For that reason, she always encouraged me to read and assisted me in learning to write properly while I was in school. I will admit that I never developed into the voracious reader that she would have liked. But I am more thankful everyday to her for instilling in me the desire to write. A few weeks ago, I was able to publish my own book entitled, View from the Mountain. Since I retired from the teaching profession several years ago, I have been writing a weekly column for the Mt. Vernon Signal. I also worked for several years as a reporter for the Clay City Times in Powell County. In each of these publications, I wrote columns about life in the late 50's and early 60's. My book is a collection of some of those weekly columns.

Over the years, many of my weekly readers have encouraged me to compile my stories into a book, and now that has become a reality. Frankly, it is still a little hard to believe. One of my high school friends, Martha Cox, was one of the people who kept asking me to write a book, so it seems fitting indeed for her to host a small event on my behalf.

On October 5, from 1 to 3 pm, I will be conducting a book signing at her hardware store (Cox Hardware) on Main Street in Mt. Vernon. I hope that many of you will be able to attend because it will give me a chance to thank you in person for being such loyal readers of my columns. It is my hope that I will see you there. I am looking forward

Tiger Pause

The sounds of drumming, introductions to Native American life, and a vision of a teepee occupied the Brodhead Elementary courtyard providing the elementary students a first-hand look at the Native American culture as a part of National American Indian Heritage Week.

The event attracted outside resources and community members to Brodhead Elementary, who came to demonstrate Native American culture, through samples of sounds, sites, stories, and ideas of the Native American life and culture. Special guests included Mr. Buzz Carloftis (Rockcastle County Judge Executive), Mr. Doug Brock (Local Businessman), and Mrs. Susan Mullins (Mohawk Indian).

Experiences that the students enjoyed included visiting a teepee, playing authentic drums, listening to legends, creating Native American art (pictograph stories), and participating in traditional dances.

Mr. Buzz Carloftiss shared his experiences of owning and growing up around Fort Sequoyah Trading Post on the Rockcastle River. Conferring with ways to use the materials that the land provides to create new products to trade or sell, Mr. Carloftiss also discussed the connections between Rockcastle County and Native American tribes. Through story students discovered that two of the three major Native American trails of the southeastern part of the United States ran through Rockcastle County.

Mr. Doug Brock, a member of the Southeastern Kentucky Shawnee Tribe, offered Native American artifacts that represented various principles of healing for the Native American, examples of healing rocks, and pipes. Mr. Brock also presented a dance demonstration for students understanding of Native American rituals, superstitions, and ceremonies.

Students appreciated getting to know Mrs. Susan Mullins, who as a Mohawk from Indian the Kahnawakereserve in Quebec, presented an authentic experience for Brodhead students. Mrs. Mullins now resides in nearby Berea and represents her culture through presentation of traditional music, dance, storytelling and history of the Native American cul-

Brodhead's Native American Culture Day was enriching for the students through a variety of handson experiences representing the Native American Culture. We would like to make a special thanks to those who took the time out of their days to open our student those experiences.

Rockets shutout for second time this season, 37-0

By: Doug Ponder

The Rockcastle County Rockets lost their first district game of the season 37-0 at Russell County last Friday night.

The loss drops the Rocket's record to 2-5 on the season and 0-1 in district play.

Although the Rocket defense put up a good performance, and forced three fumbles during the game, the Rocket offense misfired most of the night as they were shutout by Russell County and only gained 96 total yards -- 82 rushing yards and 14 passing yards. Despite the performance of the Rocket defense, Russell County still had a great night offensively gaining a total of 450 yards on the night with 314 yards on the ground and 136 yards through the Even though the Rock-

Next Friday night will be "Youth League Night"

when the youth league football players will be recognized at center field during halftime of the game. Players will also receive free admission if they wear their team jersey to the game.

The annual Rocket Football Hall of Fame induction ceremony will also take place at center field during half time. The inductees will also be honorary captains for the Rockets during the coin toss as well.

Kentuckians get chance at polls to ensure right of hunting and fishing

Kentuckians get the opportunity during next month's elections to constitutionally solidify their hunting and fishing heritage by voting for a constitutional amendment that guarantees their personal right to hunt, fish and harvest wildlife through traditional methods.

The 2011 Kentucky General Assembly overwhelmingly passed House Bill 1, also known as "The Right to Hunt and Fish," which established a ballot initiative during the November 2012 general elec-

The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources worked closely with the bill's sponsors, as did the League of Kentucky Sportsmen and the National Rifle Association. The Commonwealth is seeking to join more than a dozen other states that already have passed constitutional hunting or fishing guarantees, including Arkansas, Alabama, Califorconsin and Alaska.

tional methods, subject only to statutes enacted by the Legislature, and to administrative regulations adopted by the designated state agency to promote wildlife conservation and management and to preserve the future of hunting and fishing. Public hunting and fishing shall be a preferred means of managing and controlling wildlife. This section shall not be construed to modify any provision of law relating to trespass, property rights, or the regulation of commercial activities."

Preserving Kentucky's rich hunting and fishing heritage remains central, but hunting, fishing and wildlife-related recreation also are tremendous economic engines in today's Commonwealth. They generate more than $3 billion in economic impact and 34,000 jobs annually. They produce nearly $209 million in state and local tax revenues.

"Kentucky was known as the Happy Hunting Ground long before it became a state, and Kentuckians today still enjoy hunting and fishing at higher rates than the national average," said Dr. Jon Gassett, commissioner of the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "We are fortunate to have the chance next month at the polls to join many other states that have already taken steps to ensure that heritage continues for our grandchildren and

Financial Aid Tip of the Month

Financial aid has a language of its own

As high school seniors and their parents begin the college financial aid process, they may find themselves faced with unfamiliar terms. This short glossary from the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority (KHEAA) may help.

•Conversion scholarship/loan. This type of financial aid requires recipients to provide certain services or pay back the funds with interest.

 Expected family contribution (EFC). This is the amount the student and family are expected to pay toward yearly college costs.

•FAFSA. The Free Application for Federal Student Aid is the form all students must complete when applying for federal and state student aid. The best way to file is online.

•Grant. Grants are usually based on financial need and generally do not have to be repaid.

•Institutional aid. Institutional aid refers to the scholarships, grants and other financial aid programs administered by the college.

•Need analysis. The answers provided on the FAFSA are analyzed to determine a student's EFC and financial need.

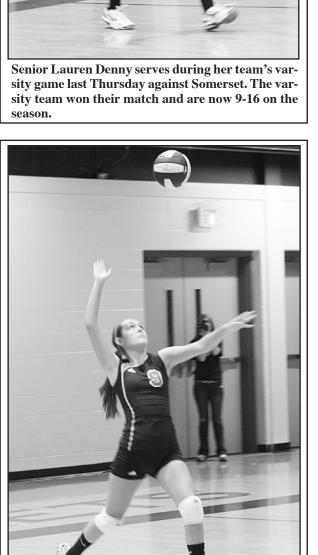

•Student Aid Report (SAR). This report is based on the information provided on the FAFSA and lets students know their EFC and eligibility for aid.

•Waiver. A waiver lets a student attend college without having to pay tuition and certain fees.

By Max Phelps Roots Ahead This Fall Fall is ideal for planting trees and shrubbery. Soils are warm, warmer than the air anyways, and they are dry enough not to have to plant in the mud. Even though leaves may cease to grow and begin changing colors or dropping to the ground, roots often continue to grow until the ground freezes. This means that in the springtime your plant is ready to grow, (rather than trying to root at the same time it's leaves are trying to Plant when the tree or shrub is finished growing for the season. This may be September for a spruce, or late October for a maple tree or many other deciduous trees. Since plants are not generally going to put out new leaves in autumn or winter the plant gets to rest and become acclimated to it's new home. Such is not the case with spring planted trees and shrubs, as a hot spring day can be really stressful to newly planted

Ideal weather makes fall planting nice, too. Crisp mornings and warm afternoons are a pleasure to be outside in. Cold and windy with flurries one day, and 80 degrees two days later, does not make for pleasant outdoor working conditions. Everyone knows spring is changeable, whereas fall is pretty predictable.

Fast-growing tender new shoots also have to have plenty of water. Fall-planted trees may never need watering except at planting time.

Moving trees is more likely to succeed in fall than at other times. For once sap is flowing in the spring, transplanting becomes much more risky.

Containerized or potted trees and shrubs may be planted anytime of the year except when the ground is frozen. Even these plants get a head start with fall planting versus waiting until

Some soils stay soggy in winter, which would make some plants die before spring due to root drowning.

If you will study the needs of your particular plants, and unless they love wet feet, insure they are planted in soils or in raised beds where they will not be in standing water, you will prevent loss of many items in boggy or clay soil conditions. A little extra attention can still make fall plantings work for you.

Some perennials benefit from being planted in fall. (Just not those in boggy locations, nor where there is no mulch or protection from frosts and heaving of soils.)

In planting zones 7 and 8 it is far preferred to plant in fall. In zones 4 and 5, it is somewhat of a risk. And in zone 6, it may depend on the plant whether fall planting is superior to spring planting

October is Domestic Violence Awareness Month, a when battered women's advocates across the nation focus attention on the epidemic of domestic violence. According to the Commonwealth Fund Survey, approximately one in four American women report being physically or sexually abused by a husband or boyfriend at some point in their lives. In Kentucky twenty-three women were killed by an intimate partner in this past year alone.

Who are the victims of domestic violence? They are our mothers, sisters and daughters. Each of the victims below is someone's daughter. What would you do if she were yours?

1. She is twenty-five years old and has two small children. She is married to a man that you have not liked from the beginning. There are times when you suspect he is abusive to her, but she always denies it. Once she had a black eye and another time she had bruises on her arms. She claimed that she ran into a door and fell down the stairs. Last week she had a broken rib which she said happened when she fell on a cabinet door. When nurses at the Emergency Room asked if she had been abused, she said she had not been. If she were your daughter, what would you

2. Her husband of twenty years regularly embarrasses her in public. He "jokes" about her weight, her clothes, her cooking and even her personal hygiene. He is always critical and expects others to laugh along with him. She usually says nothing. When she does speak up, he says he was just kidding and tells her she ought to be able to take a joke. There has never been any indication that he has been physically abusive, but the verbal abuse hurts your daughter just as much. Their fourteen-year-old son is now being verbally abusive to his mother. If she were your daughter, what would you do?

3. Her husband is insanely jealous and possessive. He will not let her out of his sight. He forbids her to visit you or any of her brothers and sisters. She cannot have friends of her own but must entertain his friends with no complaints. He regularly accuses her of seeing other men. He checks the mileage on the odometer on the rare occasions he lets her go somewhere by herself. He notes the position of the wheels in the gravel driveway when he leaves her at home alone would you do?

4. She dated a man for three months and then broke up with him, but he will not give up. He follows her to work and back home. He drives by her house at all hours of the night. He calls her at work and at home, sometimes twenty times in an hour. Once when she came home from work he was sitting in her living room, even though the doors had been locked. While never making any direct threats, he has said that he cannot live without her. She thinks he is dangerous and just wants him to leave her alone. If she were your daughter, what would you

Whether or not we help these women says much about our compassion for those who are wounded. "In as much as ye have done it unto the least of these. . . .

Compelling Forces in Life By Howard Coop

Do you remember Friday evening, March 3, 1967?

That ordinary day, fortyfive years ago, had ended; not much out of the ordinary had happened that day. The evening, for most of us, was quiet and peaceful. After a routine day, many of us were at home relaxing in front of an old small screen black and white television while watching an episode entitled "The Show Must Go On" of GOMER PYLE, U. S. M. C. That show, featuring Jim Neighbors as Gomer Pyle, was very popular, and almost everyone adored Gomer, a naïve and somewhat inept country boy who had joined the Marine Corps.

Near the end of that episode, many of us, I am sure, were totally surprised by a powerful and moving scene. Gomer began singing, in an unusual voice we did not know the country boy possessed, a song entitled "The Impossible Dream." Because of Gomer's performance in that scene, the song, written a year earlier by Joe Darion, became a popular hit.

From childhood, some of us were reminded by both good parents and good teachers that excessive daydreaming was not acceptable. We were told in no uncertain terms that we should, as Rudyard Kipling wrote, "dream, but not make dreams" our "master." "The Impossible Dream" is a powerful reminder that, at all times, we should dream, that is, aim at, and strive for, the highest and the best. Great aspirations, high hopes, noble ambitions, and lofty ideals should be, and are, compelling forces in life that lead to real accomplishment and successful living. Therefore, they are tremendously important.

The idea expressed in "The Impossible Dream" is not new; it goes back to times long past. Many years ago while studying English literature as a sophomore in college, I underlined some words in a poem written by Robert Browning, a nineteenth century English poet. As a guiding principle, those words are still with me: "Ah, but a man's reach should exceed his grasp, or what's a heaven for."

Brodhead Fire Department and the Rockcastle County Sheriff's Department responded to a single car accident Tuesday afternoon on Hwy 70 in Brodhead. Authorities say Roger Napier, 34, of Manchester was returning home from a job with his Cumberland Valley Communications crew when he got distracted and ran off a roadway before colliding with a water drain. Napier was transported to the Rockcastle Regional Hospital where he was treated for minor injuries and released.

while I was at Cardinal Hill was the first time I realized that I was paralyzed, and that I was there for rehab. I had to learn how to cope and to do things in a new way — with my now disability."

She returned to Cardinal Hill for a second round of rehab to learn the basics. It was time to get her life back,

Mother of two, Brock said her children were her inspiration to get up and go.

"I hit rock bottom, and God pulled me through it. They were my motivation,"

Brock is paralyzed from the chest down and uses a wheelchair for everyday activities. This life-changing accident was difficult for her husband and children, especially her son Noah, who celebrated his fifth birthday while she was at Cardinal Hill.

"All of my family came to Cardinal Hill; it was special," she said.

After rehab, Brock was not going to let her disability keep her from going to work or her daughter's basketball games. She was ready to get back into the swing of things and within months of her accident purchased a handicap accessible van and a stand-up wheelchair.

"My first outing by myself in a vehicle was Noah's Thanksgiving lunch at school when he was in kindergarten," she said.

After a year off for recovery, Brock returned to the workforce as an employee of Bluegrass Community and Technical College. In fall 2011, a job came open at SCC and before she knew it, she began working full-time at home again in London.

"The stand-up wheelchair definitely helps. It allows me to be able to stand up in front of the classroom to teach just as I did before," she said.

Students are taken aback at first, realizing how much effort Brock puts into maneuvering up and down to each cosmetology student as they practice cutting hair on mannequins. "I feel like I am motivation for the students, because they see that I have overcome what I have and continue to do what I wanted to do," she said.

Brock's faith has helped her through the trying times. She teaches with smile and doesn't stress over the small

"God can get you through anything. I'm living proof that he has a purpose moment that brought out so many emotions, Brock said. "I get emotional when it comes to my kids. That's when it really hits me hard because I never want them to suffer what I've been through. I try really hard to be the 'cool mom,' and I want to be able to do things for them." Her husband, Tim, said he doesn't see her any different today than from before the accident, and Brock said her kids don't even see the wheelchair when they spend time with her. Her disability hasn't changed the fact that she is still a wife and mother.

"Things happen to you and you can overcome them and continue to go on with your life," she said.

Woman arrested for drug trafficking/possession

By: Doug Ponder

A Mt. Vernon woman was arrested Sunday night for drug possession and drug trafficking after the Mt. Vernon Police made a traffic stop on Newcomb Avenue in Mt. Vernon. Arrested at the scene was Rhonda Sue Cromer, 42, of Mt. Vernon.

According to Mt. Vernon police reports, officers Jeff Harness and Stallsworth made the traffic stop after observing Cromer's vehicle had a cracked windshield. Once officers proached the vehicle, Cromer appeared to be under the influence of a controlled substance and was attempting to conceal something inside her bra. Upon asking Cromer to step out of the vehicle, officers could hear what sounded like pills rattling inside a bottle.

After Cromer refused to remove the item from her bra, officers ordered Cromer to pull her bra away from her body and a white pill bottle fell onto the ground.

Inside the pill bottle, offound oxycodone tablets. Officers also found $35 in cash inside Cromer's wallet which was believed to be used for drug transactions. Cromer was charged with driving with an obstructed windshield, drug paraphernalia, possession of a controlled substance and trafficking in controlled substance. Cromer was lodged in the Rockcastle County Detention Center where she was later released on a $10,000 unsecured bond.

Spring system along early pioneer route led to founding of Mt. Vernon

By David W. Owens The founding of the town of Mt. Vernon owes its existence to essentially three things; the everlasting sweetwater limestone springs known today as Spout Springs and Courthouse Springs, rich bottom land with prime timber, and the person of Stephen Langford.

Second Section

After the establishment of Fort Harrod, Fort Boonesborough, and Fort Logan, in the Kentucky territory during the 1770's, and the ending of the American Revolution land became available for pioneers willing to trek the Kentucky wilderness. As immigrants began through pouring Cumberland Gap on their way through the western wilderness in quest of homestead land, present day Rockcastle County was a thoroughfare of three roads that led to their destinations. The first pioneer road through Rockcastle County was Skeggs Trace which led to the first and third settlements Fort Harrod (1774) and Fort Logan (1775.) The second road was Boones Trace that led to Boonesborough (1775), Kentucky's second settlement. Later when Kentucky became a state, Governor Isaac Shelby ordered a wagon road built from Cumberland Gap to Crab Orchard which became known as the Wilderness Road (1792.)

As these routes were developed, one enterprising individual saw an opportunity to seize upon a commercial operation of western immigration.

Stephen Langford was an educated man that had found himself on the wrong side when the Revolutionary War ended. Englishmen, who were still loyal to the crown often found they were not welcome in their communities after the colonies gained their independence. They either returned to England or went west. Langford chose to "Go west young man."

The western migration through Kentucky was largely brought about by two advents; first the Christian Monarchy Feudal system practiced in Europe did not allow common people to own land. Only those of noble birth could posses land tittles. Second, the ending of the war opened the western lands for anyone to obtain land. If you were adventurous enough to explore a new land you could become a land title holder. This opened the flood gates and money was to be had.

When the Wilderness Road was being blazed to shorten the route to Crab Orchard, Stephen Langford planed to build a station somewhere between the Rockcastle River Ford and Crab Orchard Station.

He scouted out the forthcoming Wilderness Road route and decided to build his station in close proximity to two springs where the turncoming pike was through. It is believed he built his station were the current NAPA Auto Parts store stands. This is based on early evidence (such as the location of Elmwood Cemetery where Stephen Langford and other early pioneers are buried, etc..) and the logic of the location being directly on the Wilderness Road turnpike and the East Fork of Skeggs Trace; plus the presence of the springs and rich bottom land. Three things were essential for a pioneer station; a reliable water supply, readily available timber, and rich bottom lands to grow grain such as corn and wheat. All three of these criteria were met at that location, or as businessmen of today would say, "Location, Location, Location.

Langford first built an outpost station on the southern bank of the Rockcastle Ford near present day Livingston, then known as Fish Point to guide traffic to his station at present day Mt. Vernon. Langford's business savvy proved true and his business flourished. He then built a dwelling house on a knoll overlooking his operation. The rest is history as

A dedication ceremony for a new piano was held at the Rockcastle Health and Rehab Center on Monday. RCHS senior Jesse Stallsworth raised money for a new piano after noticing the old piano was in terrible shape and extremely difficult to play. Stallsworth raised over $5,000 for the instrument and donations came from as far away as Oneida, Tennessee. Stallsworth used extra money donated to buy two new microphones, new bound hymnals and a new Sony portable boombox for the nursing home. In the top photo, residents of the nursing home enjoy hearing Stallsworth, at right, play the Langford or Spout Springs, is a beautiful landing place, located along the Wilderness Road, with a little plain below and thick woods on the ridges above Langford Station now known as Mt. Vernon. It looks like the kind of place the Indians would always choose to camp and worship. But there is a story of fratricide connected with it; a crime so uncommon that the spot is regarded with terror and prophesy. No Indian will drink of its waters known as, "The Place of Two Ghosts."

The Place of Two Ghosts

The Cherokees related that many years ago, before the White Man came through Cumberland Gap, a quarrel arose between two brothers of the Bear Clan, who had the rattlesnake for their totem. While encamped at the spring, one brother had a dream or vision that a white man named Langford, of the Long selection for his station. As immigrants were traveling the early pioneer routes, Indian at-sibility. Owens authored a paper he entitled, The Place of the Two Ghosts. This paper suggested there was a psychological reason regarding Native Americans and their superstitions in Langford's decision to build his station near the springs.

Mr. Owens was a Depot Agent for the L&N Railroad and an amateur archeologist. He had one of the largest Native American collections in the state; some of which is now housed at the Knox County Historical Society in Barbersville. He also built the Thomas Walker replica cabin at Dr. Thomas Walker State

In Mt. Vernon, the old

Knives, would come and take their sacred spring. This enraged the other brother who believed that no white man could forcibly take Cherokee land. He drew his knife and slew his brother. The Bear Clan, in keeping with tribal law, killed the other brother as a murderer and buried him at the scene of the crime by his brother. One on each side of the Spout Springs. According to Cherokee legend, any Indian who drank from its waters would experience bad luck or any Indian encamped near their graves, the brother spirits would arise and either re-enact the quarrel and the murder or annoy their visitors so much in some manner, that they could not sleep. Therefore the spring was viewed as having a bad spirit and a place to be shunned by Author's note: At the time of the movement of Euro-Americans into pioneer Kentucky, present day Rockcastle County was inhabited by the Bear Clan of the Cherokee Nation. Their most well known principal leader was Chief Doublehead. The Bear Clan worshipped two great spirits, Father Moon and Mother Earth. Caves, waterfalls, and springs were sacred places to worship for the Bear Clan.

Whether you believe Indian myths or not, if the Indians believed this myth it may have been an incentive for Langford to choose the site to make his station safe house.

Small engines team takes 1st at State Fair

Submitted by

Chapter Reporter Bethany McKinney

"Success is to be measured not so much by the position that one has reached in life as by the obstacles which he has overcome."

(Booker T. Washington)

Every year during the Kentucky State Fair people throughout the state come for the exciting rides, deep fried Twinkies, and the shopping vendors. However, FFA members come to compete in many contests such as Nursery Judging, Livestock Judging, Small Engines, and the Cattle Shows. Rockcastle County's reason for going: excelling in all!

During state fair, while many people were outside enjoying all the fun activities going on, FFA members were hard at work competing in many contests. One of these contests was Nursery Judging. In Nursery Judging, teams of no more than four have to identify different types of plants that come from a nursery in Louisville, and then take a thoroughly written test based on plant and nursery care. Rockcastle's nursery team consisted of Sarah Pigg, Amie Hale, and Charity Adams. The team placed 5th overall.

Another contest going on during State Fair was Livestock Judging. In livestock judging the members evaluate several classes of livestock animals and score them based on their production potential. Such as, if a female would make a good mother or if a male would sell a lot for meat. The Livestock Judging team in Rockcastle consisted of Kyle Peacock, Kayla Reynolds, and Robert Reynolds. The livestock judging team placed sixth overall out of 65 teams.

One of the last contests going on during the first week was the Small Power Equipment contest or small engines. In small engines the teams take a written test based on basic knowledge of small engines, identify various parts and tools involved in small engines, and figure out what is wrong with an engine placed in front of them.

The small engines team placed first overall with Spencer Baldwin as the state high individual, Spencer Childress as the third high, and Larkan Prewitt as the fourth high individual. The small engines team has won the state contest the past seven out of eight years. In addition to placing first, each member of the team received a $10,000 scholarship to Ohio Technical College. Congratulations to everyone that competed.

Thinking About Cleaning Your Carpet! Some things to think about...

What is the best way to clean my carpet, should I use the old technology of steam cleaning or the new technology of dry foam?

Test results from Consumer Report, 2008.

Option 1: Steam Cleaning-How does it work? A. Steam Cleaners saturate your carpet and floor pad with hot (150* degree) soapy water containing lye and beach to help dissolve stains. B. After your carpet reaches its maximum saturation point the solution is then extracted by means of a commercial shop vacuum. The results: Removes less than 20% of the soil from the carpet driving the remainder down deeper into the carpet fibers. The lye/ bleach solution used by steam cleaners to dissolve stains fades carpet colors. Drying time is 1 to 5 days depending on the carpet texture. As a result of the water saturation, carpet fibers harden and the floor pad remains damp, which promotes bacteria growth and mildewing, causing carpet threads to rot, shorting the life of your carpet. Carpet manufactures recommend that you do not steam clean carpets.

Option 2: Dry Foam-How does it work?

C. Carpet fibers are agitated with carpet combs to separate the fibers loosening dirt particles, which are then dry cleaned with an industrial strength vacuum.

D. The carpet is then shampooed with horse hair brushes using Dry-Foam lather, a solution that contains six different cleaners and fabric softener, color brightener, deodorizer, disinfectant, crystalline agent, scotch guard, & degreaser. Does not contain lye or bleach. E. Carpet fibers are then groomed to fluff up worn walk areas to give a uniform look to the carpet. The results: Removes over 90% of carpet soil. Rejuvenates and brightens colors and patterns of carpets. Drying times is less than 2 hours. Floor pads remain dry-Fabric Softener makes carpets soft again-Promoting the life of the carpet. Carpet manufacturers recommend Dry Foam to clean Carpets.
